WALL STREET STOCK TRADE FERRATIC AND SLOW; CLOSE MAINLY UP

Market Value of All Shares Listed on the Exchange Increased $1,118,539,308 During December to Total of $64,707,878,131.

LOANS ARE CALLED BUT MONEY EASES

Radio Is Principal Target of "Bear Traders" — Total Sales for Session Only 1,692,000.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The stock market closed irregularly today after a series of erratic and inconclusive price movements. Trading again slipped into dullness, the day's sales falling below 1,750,000 shares. Fluctuations appeared to reflect a struggle for control of the market between opposing speculative forces, with neither able to gain any decided advantage.

Radio was the principal target of "bear" traders, breaking more than two points to a new low on the current movement at 35 1/2 and ending slightly above that figure. U. S. Steel common closed 1/4 lower at 19 1/2, after fluctuating between 18 1/2 and 19 1/2. J. I. Case, Liggett & Myers B, International Telephone, Fox Film, Otis Elevator, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Montgomery Ward and Standard Oil of New Jersey were among the popular issues to lose a point or two.

Market Values Up $1,118,539,308. Total borrowings by members of the New York stock exchange against stock collateral on Jan. 2 amounted to 6.16 per cent of the market value of all listed shares on that date, a decrease of 0.16 per cent from Dec. 1, when the ratio was 6.32 per cent, and a decrease of 0.18 per cent from Jan. 2, 1929, when the ratio was 6.54 per cent.

The renewed demand for the American Tobacco Company was based on unconfirmed reports that merger discussions were on. Western Union was 1 1/2, and American Machine & Foundry, Brooklyn Union Gas, Colgate & Alkman, General Railway Signal and Warren Bros. all closed to 1/2 points higher.

Pending Merger. Business news over the week-end was not of a nature to cause market enthusiasm, although a few favorable developments appeared, including a reported upswing in Chevrolet operations. Secretary of Commerce Lamont's statement of public works expenditures in 1929 was without market effect. Merger negotiations were reported to be pending between the E. F. Goodrich and Miller companies, and the Jewel Tea Co. signed a three-year contract to operate Club Aluminum.

The Kansas City Southern Railway, the first of the larger systems to publish the result of its December operations, reported a net operating income of the month amounting to $438,120, compared with $433,568. Net operating income for the 12 months aggregated $4,232,543, as contrasted with $4,070,978 for 1928. Call money dropped from 4 1/2 to 4 per cent, with funds reported to be available in the outside market as low as 3 1/2. The time money and commercial paper markets were quiet.

Foreign exchanges displayed a firm undertone. Sterling Cables closed slightly to 44.85 15-16.

Byrd Geological Party Returns To Main Base After 1500-Mile Sledging Trip; Gone Three Months

Dr. Gould and His Men Wildly Welcomed at Little America—Covered 34 Miles on Last Leg of Journey.

By RUSSELL OWEN. (Copyright, 1930, by the New York Times and St. Louis Post-Dispatch.) This story is published exclusively in St. Louis in the Post-Dispatch. All news articles from members of the Byrd expedition, from special correspondents assigned to it, appear only in the Post-Dispatch in this city.

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, Jan. 19.—Over the hills of the barrier to the south this morning appeared a long, black line which moved slowly toward camp, dipping out of sight into hollows and reappearing, always a little nearer than before.

It was the southern geological party, led by Dr. Laurence M. Gould, coming in from a sledging journey which had taken it more than 1500 statute miles. That is only a little less than the distance from here to the South Pole and back and is one of the longest sledging journeys ever made in the Antarctic.

As the men came toward camp, those waiting for them fired off signal pistols and waved their arms. By the advancing group sticks were waved joyously. The party had been on the trail for nearly three months.

Last night word came from Gould that he would be in this morning, but he was not expected so early. The men had been traveling at night, and when they reached here at 9:30 o'clock they had covered 34 miles in their last long push.

One Without a Beard. As the expedition topped the last slope at the edge of the camp, Mike Thorne shot ahead, skating on his sled down the hill and up toward the group, which rushed toward him. Admiral Byrd was in front and, as he halted and those behind him stopped also, Mike came up grinning behind the dirt on his face and shook hands with the chief. He was the only one without a beard.

Behind him was a figure which we knew to be Gould, but it was not the Larry whom we had seen on his way out of the camp. L. M. Gould, president of the T. A. T. Maddux Air Lines, Los Angeles; Mrs. Doris Brown, Los Angeles; Mrs. Doris Cantillon, wife of Richard Cantillon, an attorney, Los Angeles; Mrs. Ida M. Gilmore, wife of Mrs. Cantillon, Los Angeles; Mrs. Hanan Collins, Fairhope, Ala.; Miss Frances Jamieson, Pasadena, Cal.; Benjamin Miller, San Francisco, Cal.; Benjamin Miller, San Francisco, Cal.; Edward J. Small, Los Angeles; Charles Raybold, Fairhope, Ala.; Elizabeth Squibb, Pasadena; Basil Russell, pilot of the plane, and Freddie Walker, assistant pilot.

"A peculiar weather mystery," was blamed by T. A. T. Maddux Air Line officers here today for the crash.

The fall of the plane was due, the executives held, to "one of those peculiar weather mysteries which blew in rain from the Pacific in the particular area" of the accident.

F. F. Freeg, flight superintendent at the Glendale terminal of the line, said the pilot of the ill-fated plane apparently was blinded by the rain and fog which hovered about the Oceanside and San Clemente bluffs. He said it was apparent that an emergency landing was being sought on account of the flying conditions, and disoriented eye-witness reports of missing motors.

Official Version of Crash. The official description of the crash was that, as the plane was making a forced landing, pilots Russell and Walker were blinded by the mist, and the craft's wing tip struck the sloping hillside before they saw the proximity of land. The wing tore loose, Freeg said, hurling the plane over on its back and burst open the wing gasoline tank. This resulted in an immediate explosion.

Two of the first persons to reach the wreck, Lieut. Virgil Westbrock, Army flyer, and Police Chief Forest Eaton of San Clemente, agreed that the plane struck the hillside at an angle and that three of the bodies had been thrown clear of the wreckage. The 13 others were piled forward in the steel cabin. Eaton said it appeared that in trying to land on sloping ground the right wing dipped and hit the hillside, hurling the craft sideways and breaking it apart in the middle.

DISASTER ASCRIBED TO LOW-LYING FOG

Agua Caliente-Los Angeles Ship Burns—Thought to Have Run Into Hill or Scraped Ground.

By the Associated Press. LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 20.—Sixteen persons were killed yesterday when a Transcontinental Air Transport—Maddux air liner crashed near San Clemente, Cal., yesterday, was given by Lamar Nelson, pilot of a Western Air Express plane which left Agua Caliente for Los Angeles a short time ahead of the T. A. T. Maddux craft.

"I ran into heavy fog a little before Oceanside and turned back," Nelson said. "Then I went inland, trying to get under the fog, but when it closed down I went back to the coast. I thought of following the highway and getting bearings by the automobile headlights, for the ceiling had closed down to about 100 feet."

Then the Maddux ship went by, apparently following the highway by the lights of the automobiles. I thought I would give it four or five minutes to get through or come back before starting through myself. I waited that time and started after it. I had hardly got started when I saw a great flash.

"I turned to the co-pilot and said, 'My God, there goes Maddux,' then I turned around and headed back to San Diego and lived about 20 years going through the fog until I reached the clear space around San Diego. We landed at North Island."

Nelson thought it was probable that the Maddux plane found the fog closing down, tried to turn and slipped off on one wing too close to the ground to avert a crash.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today issued a final decree, carrying out a decision of last June, adjudging 52 oil companies guilty of violating the Sherman antitrust act in pooling their oil-cracking patents and enjoined them permanently from further violations of the law.

The court order was signed by Judge Evan A. Evans and George T. Page, the same Judges who had sat with Judge A. B. Anderson as trial judges in the United States District Court.

KING GEORGE RECEIVES ALL DELEGATES TO NAVAL PARLEY

DELEGATION HEADS REAL "BIG FIVE"

Arrangements for Method of Procedure Made at Conference With Premier MacDonald.

By the Associated Press. LONDON, Jan. 20.—King George, who will make his first recent public appearance tomorrow to open the naval disarmament conference, received all the delegates to the conference at Buckingham Palace today. The King had returned to London at noon from Sandringham.

MacDonald was the first of the chief delegates to arrive at the palace. He had an audience with the King before the general reception. The other delegates rode to the grand entrance, into the inner courtyard, whence they were conducted to the picture gallery next to the throne room on the first floor. When all had assembled, the delegates filed into the throne room, where the Prime Minister introduced to the King the chief delegates of each nation, who, in turn, presented their compatriots.

The King, who was in morning dress, shook hands cordially with the delegates and expressed the hope that the deliberations of the conference would be crowned with success.

Cordially Received by King. Secretary of State Stimson and the American delegation were cordially received by the King, who chatted with Stimson for three or four minutes before greeting Ambassador Dawes.

The visitors wore morning dress and each waited 10 seconds distant from the King while his immediate predecessor was being presented. They were instructed before entering not to talk to the King unless he began the conversation. The King recognized many of those in the line and detained Dwight W. Morrow for several minutes.

All the delegates said that the King appeared to be in the best of health and looked very bright and cheerful.

In conversing with Morrow the King, who is particularly interested in Mexico, asked a number of questions about his work there.

The five delegations met this morning with Prime Minister MacDonald at No. 10 Downing street and had no difficulty in agreeing on a program designed to avert the weakness encountered at Geneva in 1927 where actual discussions were left to minor committees. Here the chiefs of the delegations themselves will constitute the real "Big Five," by which the major decisions will be made.

Heilro Wakatsuki, head of the Japanese delegation, was first to arrive, followed by Andre Tardieu, French Premier, who was accompanied by Aristide Briand, French Foreign Minister.

Stimson, American Secretary of State, followed. He did not step outside. The general public gathered outside to watch the delegation heads assemble.

FRENCH SECURITY HIS FIRST TASK, SAYS TARDIEU

Prime Minister, in London for Naval Conference, Points to Exposed Position of His Country.

By ARNO DOSCH FLEUROT.
Paris Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.
Copyright, 1930, by the Post and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (The New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Jan. 20.—France demands that political considerations be discussed first at the London naval conference and the question of limiting navies by categories
afterward. Premier Andre Tardieu told Secretary of State Stimson last evening, and Prime Minister Mac-Donald three hours later.

It is no use, he said, for the conference to try to decide how to reduce the size of navies until the participants in it have agreed what navies are needed. The security of France and its colonial empire is his first duty, declared the French Premier, adding that security is not strictly and solely a naval matter.

Tardieu has come to London, he explained, representing the principal continental power with coast lines on the channel, the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. On one side France is in contact with England and under the necessity of considering the possibility of attack from the North Sea. The Atlantic lies in front, and France is not only exposed in the Mediterranean to all the dangers faced by any other Mediterranean power but also the danger inherent in the fact that part of France is in Africa. France, he argued, has the second largest colonial empire in the world, being second only to England in the need of defending her colonies and the lines of communication with them.

Must Give Figures.

The French Premier declared that he could only fulfill his mission in London by giving figures on what France considers her naval needs for all purposes and he is willing to listen to anyone else's ideas on the naval needs of his country.

Land forces have always played an equal part with naval forces, Tardieu said, and now air forces are also of equal importance. Before any nation can decide how much it dare cut its sea forces, he said, it must come to an agreement, at least with itself, on how far it is ready to go in cutting the other two arms of national defense.

What France asks of the conference, her spokesman said, was that it open with a general discussion on the possibilities of naval disarmament in which every one of the five Powers present would have an equal hearing as to the naval needs.

France and Italy.

French parity with Italy, Tar-dieu said, need not be discussed for the present because it would be evident when all naval needs were outlined that there are no points of comparison between those of France and Italy.

In the French Premier's discussion with the American Secretary of State, Mr. Stimson expressed himself as ready to listen to whatever France or any other power present had to say, America having no intention to force the discussion into any particular channel.

Secretary Stimson, at his country home, yesterday conferred with Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy and later Stimson and Ambassadors Morrow and Gibson went to the French Embassy, where they were received by Premier Tardieu, Foreign Minister Briand and the French Ambassador. Stimson called his talk with Grandi "satisfactory to the highest degree," and said the meeting with the French was "interesting and encouraging."

OUTLINES JAPAN'S POLICY IN NAVAL DISARMAMENT

Premier Says His Country Will Insist on Only Enough Ships as Defense of Country Requires.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Jan. 20.—Premier Hamaguchi, on the eve of the opening of the five-Power naval arms conference at London, today gave the Associated Press an exclusive statement detailing Japan's hopes for success of the parley.

Japan, the Premier said, was determined to contribute to the limit of its ability to make the conference "a success, a triumph of good sense and good will." He expressed Japan's hope that the "newly developed spirit of trust among nations, which we have written into the treaty outlawing war, will permit us to approach this task free from many of the fears and suspicions which have hampered our former efforts." The statement follows:

"Japan enters the naval conference at London with the full, solemn realization of the opportunity offered there to share in the achievement which the future generations shall hold in grateful remembrance. We are determined to contribute to the limit of our ability to make it a success, a triumph of good sense and good will through reconciliation of our various needs for defense with universal aspirations to be released from the dangers and burdens of competitive armament.

"Our Government believes that the newly developed spirit of trust among nations, which we have written into the treaty outlawing war, permits us to approach this task free from many of the fears and suspicions which have hampered our former efforts. We have sent our delegates to London hopeful that they can accomplish more than merely set the limits of the production of ships of war; we want actual reduced navies, either those now in use or those in the building, and projected, and so lighten the burdens of our people.

"Our delegates speak for a united people. We believe in the justice of those proposals they are to put before the conference. Any amount of strength Japan proposes to retain for itself will always be gauged by the minimum needs for its national security, no more, no less. Content with a naval force inferior to that of the American or British navies, we offer no menace to any Power.

"Japan hopes the London conference will produce an agreement among all of the five Powers participating. Japan wants the provisions of that agreement to become immediately effective, but also hopes that this will lead to wider application of the principles of disarmament through the League of Nations.

"The Government hopes that behind the agreement concerning auxiliary vessels, the five Powers can arrange an extension of the capital ship replacement schedules fixed at the Washington conference reducing the maximum tonnage and gun calibers—if indeed it be necessary that these schedules be carried out at all."

Below Freezing in Mexico. MONTERREY, Mexico, Jan. 20.—Three persons died here yesterday as a consequence of the almost unprecedented fall in temperature. The thermometers showed 23 degrees Fahrenheit above zero. Public fountains froze, as did many pipes of the public water supply system. Most of the crops were ruined.

For Coughs Due To Colds, Mix This at Home

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of bad coughs due to colds, giving prompt relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

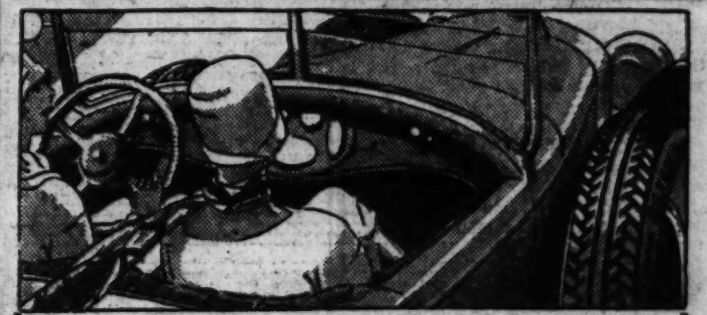

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of incipient bronchial coughs and other severe coughs due to colds.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Too Much ACID

Many people, two hours after eating, suffer indigestion as they call it. It is usually excess acid. Correct it with an alkali. The best way, the quick, harmless and efficient way, is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained for 50 years the standard with physicians. One spoonful of water neutralizes many times its volume in acids, and at once. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

You will never use crude methods when you know this better method. And you will never suffer from excess acid when you prove out this easy relief. Please do that—for your own sake—now.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

BOOTLEGGER IS SOUGHT IN SHOOTING OF WRITER

"J." Said to Have Planned Cafe Holdup of Which Garret Was Victim.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—A man described by police as a bootlegger was sought today as the instigator of an attempted robbery in which Garret Garret, magazine writer, was seriously wounded Saturday night, in a residence restaurant which has a selected clientele.

Garret was shot when he ignored a command to sit still as three men entered the restaurant conducted by Mrs. Madeline Brown in West Fifteenth street, on the edge of Greenwich Village. At a hospital, where he was taken with a bullet wound in the lung and two lesser wounds, Garret was pronounced out of danger.

With Frederick Simpich, another writer and former United States Consul; Miss Magdalene Davis, an advertising woman, and Miss Hazel Mumm, a bacteriologist, Garret was seated at a table on the first floor. The robbers had gained admittance to the place by saying they had a package to deliver from "J."

The leader, who wore a mask, addressed the diners, "Ladies and gentlemen, stay where you are and keep your seats," he ordered.

Garret, whose back was to the man, arose and, jamming his hands deep into his coat pockets, advanced toward the intruder. "What's this, what's this?" he asked.

In reply, the robber fired four times.

Three bullets hit Garret. The gunmen fled.

Garret and the others in his party were at first reluctant to answer questions of detectives.

After a personal investigation, Police Commissioner Whelan said the case was simply a robbery attempt and there was apparently nothing behind the shooting of Garret other than his show of resistance.

Simpich and the two women viewed pictures in the rogues' gallery but failed to identify any of the robbers.

Suspect an Ex-convict.

Police said their theory of the robbery attempt was that the man designated by the robbers as "J." was a bootlegger who had planned the robbery. They said they were seeking an ex-convict whom they thought was the man.

Mrs. Ida H. Garret, wife of the writer, from whom he has been separated several years, expressed doubt the shooting was a holdup attempt, but refused to amplify her statement.

She said she and Garret separated in 1914 and that a suit for annulment brought by Garret the next year had been dismissed, later she said she received maintenance.

3 ARMY PLANES REACH SPOKANE ON TEST FLIGHT

Total of 17 Now at Washington City, the Half-Way Mark of Long Journey.

By the Associated Press.

SPOKANE, Wash., Jan. 20.—Seventeen of the 22 Arctic patrol planes of the army's first pursuit squadron, sent out from Selfridge Field, Mich., for winter flying experience, landed here today, having completed half their assignment.

Thirteen planes, in charge of Maj. Ralph Royce, glided onto the ice at Newman Lake, 16 miles from Spokane, yesterday afternoon after a speedy trip from Great Falls, Mont. They thus joined the three pursuit planes and one trimotor transport which flew through blizzards to arrive from Kalispell, Mont., Friday.

The remaining five ships are scattered from Montana to Michigan.

PLANS FEDERAL GAME RESERVE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPULAR BLUFF, Mo., Jan. 20.—Location of a Federal game and bird sanctuary within about 20 miles of Popular Bluff is under consideration, according to James G. Hammond of Chicago, field representative of the Isaac Walton League of America, who has been in Popular Bluff for the past three days.

It is known that several sites have been under consideration, all of which have proven highly satisfactory to the organization. The tract would have to be composed of possibly 200 acres, with a portion in swamps and a goodly part in high land, with plenty of wooded cover and feed for use as a breeding place for wild turkey, deer and other game.

FATALLY CUT WITH A RAZOR

Reecie Harper, 27 years old, a Negro, 4A South Twenty-second street, died last midnight at City Hospital No. 2. His throat had been cut by Harry Wilson, 22, Negro, 110 North Twenty-second street.

Wilson said he cut Harper with a razor in self defense when Harper reached into his pocket as if to get a revolver when they met at Twenty-second and Market street, after quarreling earlier in the evening.

AMERICAN GYPSY KING BURIED

By the Associated Press.

LAS VEGAS, N. M., Jan. 20.—Butler Sparks, 46 years old, of Sacramento, Cal., known to his followers as King of Gypsies in the United States, was buried here with full rites of the sect Saturday. Another ceremony will be conducted in nine days.

A feast followed the services, as is the gypsy custom. At the burial rites the hat, money and other personal property of Sparks were placed in the casket with the body.

Charged with Laziness

Guilty Simply of Acidity!

More than one man today is misjudged and unjustly penalized because of a not understood physical condition rather than any lack of willingness or ability.

So many of us are only half ourselves, only fifty percent efficient, because we are victims of an insidious condition of acidity! That persistent tired feeling—that clouded mind—that lack of dash and fire—that missing punch that decides so many situations in business—are all usually due to an acid system.

Acidity is brought on by our un-natural eating, excessive smoking and irregular hours. It impairs digestion, and causes fermentation and putrefaction in the intestines and drags us down physically and mentally.

A remarkably new corrective of acidity has been developed by a famous 100-year-old pharmaceutical house in Germany.

This new, improved magnesium comes in the form of small white tablets called Magnesia Oxidized which do not have to be chewed, but may be swallowed whole.

Magnesia Oxidized, upon contact with the acid in the stomach, generates nascent, or active, oxygen. Now, as active oxygen, as any doctor will tell you, when generated within the digestive tract does just the things required for acidity. It stimulates the secretion of the alkaline mucus. It checks the putrefaction and fermentation in the gastro-intestinal canal. It exercises a stimulating effect upon the activities of the intestinal walls and aids the movement of the bowels.

All three effects are necessary to the true relief of acidity and Magnesia Oxidized supply them in a perfect natural manner.

5-Day Acid Test

See for yourself how much acid has to do with your run-down condition and that persistent feeling of tiredness. Make this 5-day acid test. Get a package of Magnesia Oxidized from Walgreen Drug Stores or any other druggist on our money-back guarantee. Take two after each meal for five days. Note the pick-up in your pep and vigor. Mark the new peace of your stomach and nerves. If five days' test doesn't show you a decided improvement in your health, return the balance of the Oxidized to your druggist and he will refund your money.

BY BROTHER-IN-LAW

Thomas Holbrook of Salemy Mo., Dies in St. Louis—Homicide Verdict Returned.

A coroner's verdict of homicide was returned today in the case of Thomas Holbrook, 24 years old, who died yesterday at Missouri Baptist Hospital where he was taken Friday suffering from a gunshot wound of the abdomen said to have been inflicted by his brother-in-law Samuel D. Taylor, after a family quarrel at Holbrook's home in Salemy, Mo.

No witnesses were heard, the coroner's finding being based on the statement of a physician at the hospital that Holbrook had named Taylor as the man who shot him. The case is in the hands of Dent County officials.

Taylor, 25, arrested Friday, at held for chicken theft.

Bakerfield, Mo., and charged with chicken theft by Sheriff Stevens of Osark County, yesterday was turned over to Dent County authorities to face a first degree murder charge.

Holbrook, who was separated from his wife, Rene, a sister of Taylor, was shot Thursday night when his wife and her brother called him to the door of the home of his mother and demanded the return of jewelry and personal effects belonging to Mrs. Holbrook. When Holbrook refused, Taylor is said to have drawn his revolver and shot him.

His feeling between the two men also was caused by Holbrook's refusal to join Taylor on a chicken-stealing expedition. Dent County authorities learned. They said the prisoner had been stealing chickens in Dent, Osark, Texas, and Douglas counties for several months. One farmer reported the loss of 200 chickens.

Until word of Holbrook's death was received, Sheriff Stevens refused to surrender him until fees amounting to $200 had been paid, since he had traveled more than 800 miles to make the arrest of Taylor. His brother, John, also is charged with chicken theft.

CHICAGOAN KILLED IN DUEL

AFTER FIGHT OVER TAXICAB

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Out of the investigation of a killing on a busy street corner Jan. 5, has come the story of a formal duel, with its toll at 20 paces.

Rocco Brandinazzi, 25 years old, bought a taxicab from Mrs. Marina Ferri, he told police. There was trouble over the payments and he lost the cab to a finance company. The rest of the story, told by Brandinazzi follows: He quarreled with Francesco Ferri, 25, the woman's husband, and Ferri challenged him to a duel to be fought at Taylor and Canal streets the following night. At 20 paces, each drew a pistol. Ferri fired first and Brandinazzi fell, letting Ferri empty his gun. Then Ferri fled, pursued by his antagonist, who fired three shots into Ferri's back. Brandinazzi then fled to the home of a friend.

Brandinazzi arrested in Indiana Harbor last night, and he had been best man at Ferri's wedding two years ago, and that the .25 caliber pistol he used in the duel was bought from Ferri for $40. Brandinazzi is held on a murder charge.

THEATER MAN ROBBED OF $300 IN HIS OFFICE

Manager of the Shenandoah on South Grand Forced to Open Safe.

The Shenandoah Theater, Grand boulevard and Shenandoah avenue, was visited at noon yesterday by two men who held up the manager, Edward J. Kennedy, in his office, forced him to open a safe and escaped with $300. The only other person in the building at the time was the janitor, who was in the basement firing the furnace.

Police arrested because he had "a few bottles of home brew in the house," Mrs. May Hayden, who conducts a rooming house at 312 Marion street, delayed until last night in reporting that she had been held up by a man in her home, robbed of $25 and nine rings valued at $1170. Two men came to her door, produced pistols and ransacked her house, taking the money from her purse and finding the jewelry in a cupboard in the basement.

Grocery Hit With Pistol. Stanley S. Molasky, grocer at 1239 North Fourteenth street, suffered scalp lacerations after opening his store this morning, when one of two robbers struck him with a pistol after complaining at finding only $4 in the cash register.

An oil filling station at 1894 South Vandeventer avenue, in charge of Sol Schechterman, was held up at 7 a. m. by an armed man, who obtained $500.

Harry Grafe, proprietor of a drug store at 3849 Finney avenue, and five customers were held up at 10:30 p. m. by two men who took $400 from the cash register.

Held Up in Forest Park. Russell Scott, 4222 Bailey avenue, and James Weaver, driving through Forest Park near the Art Museum, were held up at midnight and robbed of $2.50, a watch and an automobile.

"If you tell police we'll come back and kill you—if you don't tell we'll come back as soon as we find work and pay you," Peter Anagnos, grocer, 2100 Franklin avenue, was told by two men who held him up and took $5 cash and $5.50 worth of groceries which one had ordered. Anagnos notified police.

Walking in front of 4338 St. Louis avenue, Mrs. Hazel McDougal, 4342 St. Louis avenue, was accosted by a negro, who seized her purse containing five pennies and a rosary.

Other holdups reported: Confectionery, 5752 Cote Brillante avenue, $25 stolen; filling station, South street and Page boulevard, $10; John T. Carroll, 12124 Hebert street, $100; Addison Methershead, 705 Wilmington avenue, $3; William Benny, 2607 North Ninth street, $4.

ARCHBISHOP GLENNON SPEAKS AT BOY CLUB'S MEETING

400 Members Attend Gathering; Judge Hartmann Also De-livers Address.

The St. Louis Boys' Club at Ninth street and Park avenue, financed by a group of business men as a gathering place for the poor boys of that neighborhood, was dedicated yesterday afternoon. Several speakers addressed friends of the club and about 400 boy members.

Archbishop Glennon declared he had "never met a real bad boy yet," holding that a boy's failure is generally due to unhealthful and harmful environment.

Circuit Judge Hartmann declared it was better to spend money for boys' clubs than to support reform schools and prisons.

Other speakers were City Registrar Jack Gross, the Rev. Charles P. Maxwell, assistant pastor of St. John's Catholic Church and organizer of the club; Edgar M. Fourier, managing director of the club, and Harry Keulin.

10TH WARD ASSOCIATION VOTES FOR SPRING AV. IMPROVEMENTS

Approves Resolution Urging Project for Making Street Major Traffic Artery.

The Tenth Ward Improvement Association, meeting yesterday in Kookuk Hall, Broadway and Kookuk street, adopted a resolution urging the Board of Aldermen to approve the project for making Spring avenue a major cross-town traffic artery, between Marameu street and Natural Bridge avenue, by widening, opening of sections and cut-offs. A recommendation for this plan, embodied in five separate ordinances, is before the board.

The association also asked for installation of an automatic traffic signal at Kookuk and Broadway, saying there have been ten fatalities in traffic accidents there in the last two years.

NAVAL OFFICER FIXES VALUE OF HIS ISLAND AT $500,000

This Is What Porto Rico Must Pay If It Takes Over San Geronimo.

Copyright, 1936, by The Press and Publishing Company, Inc., New York World.
SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Jan. 20.—Porto Rico must pay Lieutenant-Commander Virgil Baker $500,000 for surrender of his 278-year lease to San Geronimo if the island Government meets its present valuation of the property, which the Navy Department leased to him.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Governor of Porto Rico, who as acting secretary of the Navy signed the San Geronimo lease, said that if the Legislature wanted to recover the property by condemnation he would approve. Baker, in a statement to La Democracia, local newspaper, said that the present value of San Geronimo was fixed by Government witnesses in the suit which the Government brought previously to cancel the lease.

TO KEEP BABY FROM CHOKING

A physician writing in North-western Journal declares that out of every 1000 babies, 100 are responsible for the deaths of many infants than any other foreign body.

He advises that "on no account, therefore, should a baby be given nuts in his food. No child should be permitted to put into his mouth small inedible articles such as babies are frequently allowed to chew on while cutting teeth. He should never be allowed to play with beads, seeds, buttons, small toys, jackstones, or other pieces of toys."

"If in spite of vigilance the baby does get something into his throat the mother should consult a physician immediately and have the object removed or else the child's life will be in jeopardy."

THREE FORMER DEPUTY CONSTABLES FREED

Assault and Kidnaping Charges Against St. Ferdinand Officers Dropped.

Indictments charging assault with intent to kill and kidnaping against three former Deputy Constables in St. Ferdinand Township, were dropped by Associate Prosecuting Attorney Noble at Clayton today.

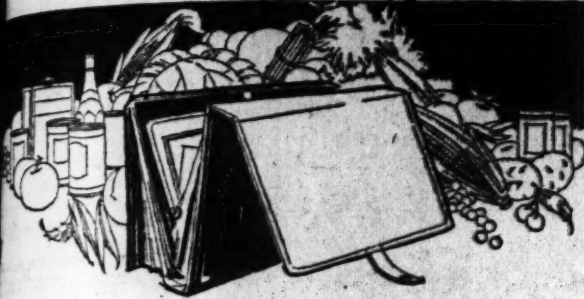

One indictment, on evidence given by Harry Ronsiek, bootlegger and ex-convict, charged Harry Firman, George Klingman and Clarence Scherrer with assault as a result of their shooting Ronsiek as he entered a Florsheim saloon in January, 1928. The deputies said Ronsiek was robbing the place when they shot him. Ronsiek, tried for burglary, charged a conspiracy to sell liquor obtained among some officials of the township and alleged he was shot as a result of the conspiracy.

In dismissing the indictment, Noble said he had been unable to find Ronsiek and that without him, there was no evidence. Another indictment charged Klingman and Firman with kidnaping Antoine Gens, former Marshal of Florissant, and the third alleged that they had assaulted Gens with intent to kill him. Noble explained that Gens told him today the men were "only joking" and that no assault had taken place. He said he was unable to find a transcript of Gens' testimony before the special grand jury that indicted the deputies.

Indictments still pending in Circuit Court at Clayton charge Firman with setting up a gambling device and charge Firman and Klingman jointly with two sales of liquor.

LEUT. W. A. MATHENY GETS CHENEY AWARD

Flier, Clothing Saturated With Gasoline, Entered Flames to Save Companion.

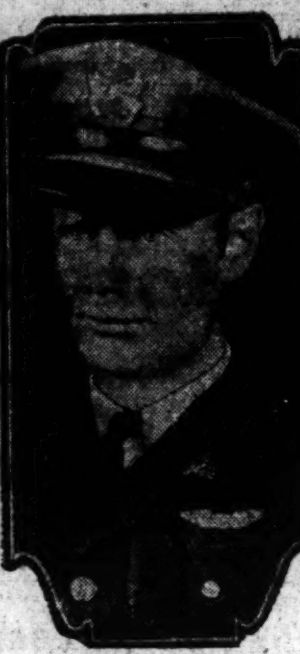

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Stopping into flames to save the life of a comrade while wearing clothes saturated with gasoline, has won Lieut. William A. Matheny of the Army Air Corps the Cheney award, which is given annually to the flying officer performing the outstanding humanitarian act of valor and self sacrifice.

Matheny, whose home is in Carrington, N. D., was the unanimous choice for 1929 of the awarding board. The prize carries with it $500 as well as an engraved bronze plaque.

With Lieut. Dwight Canfield, a sergeant, Matheny was flying a bombing plane to the Canal Zone. On Aug. 30, 1929, shortly after taking off from Managua, Nicaragua, one of the motors caught fire. In an effort to return to the field the officers forced the remaining motor until it too was out of commission, and the plane crashed in a jungle before they could use parachutes. In the crash the tanks burst, saturating the two officers with gasoline.

The sergeant was thrown clear and Matheny ran from the flaming wreck but missed Canfield. He saw him sitting, apparently unable to move, by the side of the plane.

away but not before Canfield's clothing caught fire.

The latter recovered from the daze and dashed, flaming like a torch, for the jungle. Matheny tackled him and attempted to smother the flames but his own clothing caught. Canfield got loose and again ran for the jungle.
Matheny's body was severely burned but he managed to extinguish the flames and immediately set after Canfield. He found the latter sitting on an old jungle road so badly burned that he died that night in hospital. It was an hour before aid came to them.

The award was established in memory of Lieut. William H. Cheney, who was killed in an air collision at Foggia, Italy, in 1918.
Mrs. Mary L. C. Goodfield of Peterboro, N. H., Cheney's mother, and Mrs. Ruth Cheney Streeter of Morristown, N. J., his sister, set aside a fund of $15,000 for the purpose.
Master Sgt. Harry Chapman received the award in 1927 for conspicuous bravery in the alshup Roma disaster, which occurred in February, 1924. Lieut. Uzal G.
Ent of the Air Corps received the 1928 award for remaining in a burning balloon after it had been struck by lightning. He was attempting to save Lieut. Paul Evert, the pilot, who had been killed, and although the balloon might have exploded at any moment, Ent would not use his parachute.

TWO TAKEN TO JOPLIN TO FACE CHARGES OF KILLING JEWELER

Pair Returned From El Paso, Tex., Likely to Be Arraigned Today.

JOPLIN, Mo., Jan. 20.—John Boone and Jack McCartney were returned to Joplin Saturday from El Paso, Tex., to face charges of first degree murder in the killing here Oct. 23, of R. T. Thompson, a jeweler.

They probably will be arraigned tomorrow in Justice Court. Both denied any connection with the killing. Boone explained a confession at El Paso, which he subsequently repudiated, to "being under the influence of a drug."

He admitted to authorities that he owned a gun which he had purchased at Galena, Kan., but declared he purchased it several days after the killing.

interim to Japan, was behind his during the afternoon. Ambassador and Mrs. Castle arrived in Yokohama this morning. Castle will serve here for the duration of the disarmament conference in Lon-

WOMAN BEATEN TO DEATH

Wife of Farmer Near Wallace, N.
C., Killed by Negro.

By the Associated Press.
WALLACE, N. C., Jan. 20.—
Mrs. Bertie English, young wife of Steve English, farmer living near here, was attacked and beaten to death at her home Saturday night. Officers arrested Dave Brookington, Negro, a few hours later.

Brookington was arrested at a lumber camp. Police said they learned he had hired an automobile near English's home shortly after midnight and had driven to the camp. English found his wife's body with her head crushed when he returned home from Wallace.
She apparently had been beaten with a stone pocker.

The Negro was later removed to the State Penitentiary at Raleigh because of feeling against him in Duplin County.

Women Are Replacing Old Style Irons with Automatic Irons

The New MASTER AUTOMATIC

Sunbeam

To Introduce It We'll Give You
$1.00 for Your Old Iron

Women everywhere pronounce the Master Automatic Sunbeam as a fast-working iron.

It keeps the exact ironing heat you want—"High," "Low," or any heat between—automatically. Never an instant's wait for the proper heat. Cannot cool—cannot overheat—saves no end of current.

bottom of the iron. Grace Vial Gray, noted Home Economics expert, claims that this broad, hot surface saves one full hour each ironing day. Air-cooled Handle prevents your hands from heat.

Once you have seen how fast it works you will want one. Regular price, $7.95—but to introduce this new Master Automatic, we'll give it to you for $6.95 and your old iron. Come in today.

Pillsbury's Wheat Bran the 100% bran

Don't trifle with constipation.

Medical science says that 90% of modern city people are more or less affected. Headaches, loss of vitality, sallow cheeks, nervousness, sleeplessness, and increased susceptibility to serious diseases—these are the dangers. Add roughage to your diet—it protects primitive man, and it will protect you.

Pillsbury's Bran is the best form—it gives you the full, gentle, natural laxative action of the unbroken flakes of pure bran. You can use it to prepare any number of delicious foods—muffins, tea cakes, apple cake, macaroons, doughnuts, etc.—the recipes are on the Pillsbury package. You can sprinkle it over salads, or mix it with cereals. You can eat it as it comes from the package, with cream and sugar. No matter how you take it, you may be sure Pillsbury's Bran will do the work—it is natural 100% bran, the kind that doctors recommend.

Every Day Take Your Vitamins Straight—Live Long-Keep Healthy

PRECIOUS VITAMINS OF COD LIVER OIL EX-TRACTED AND PUT IN-TO TABLETS.

Now, Doctor: when you prescribe McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets for run down conditions, loss of weight, nervousness and other allments where real Vitamins are sorely needed you can rest assured that your patient is getting the good substance that Cod Liver Oil contains—the oily, useless fat is discarded.

Cod Liver Oil at its best is ill-smelling, and your patients hate to even look at it, so now that you are able to give them the same Vitamins by prescribing McCoy's, isn't it the part of wisdom to designate these health-building tablets?

Another thing to consider is that people won't take Cod Liver Oil in winter because it often becomes rancid and no stomach could stand it.
But, how different is McCoy's.
Doctor: your patient can take them winter and summer and carry a week's treatment in his vest pocket.

If he cares to do so. Then there are the underdeveloped kidneys to consider. Doctor—Forcing them to take unpleasant Cod Liver Oil for rickets and an under-nourished condition when McCoy's in dairy sugar-coated tablets is just as rich in Vitamin A and D is really cruelty to children.

In McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets, sickly, run-down, nervous people get the same beneficial substance—the same Vitamins that they get in pure Vitamin tested Cod Liver Oil.

They are sure to get them.
When in two tablets of McCoy's your patient gets the equal of one teaspoonful of pure Norwegian Vitamin tested Cod Liver Oil and for every ailment, malady or run-down condition for which you prescribe Cod Liver Oil you will find McCoy's just as good. And you know, Doctor, that we would not be allowed to make this statement if it were not true. All drugists dispense them—precious but inexpensive. 60 tablets

FIGHTING ON CHINESE RAILWAY

NANKING, China, Jan. 20.—Fighting has broken out on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, where Government forces are reported to have taken the offensive and to be advancing from Pukow to Pengpu. Pengpu is the headquarters of the rebel General Shih Yu-shan. Many wounded have begun arriving in Nanking.

Two Killed in Coasting Accident. DAVENPORT, Ia., Jan. 20.—Ruth Killian, 12 years old, died here yesterday, the second victim of a coasting accident Saturday night in which Paul Purcell, 12, was killed when the bobbed in which they were coasting ran into an automobile. Three other children suffered slight injuries.

Cold in Head, Chest or Throat?

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole rub once an hour for five hours... what a glorious relief!

Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole.

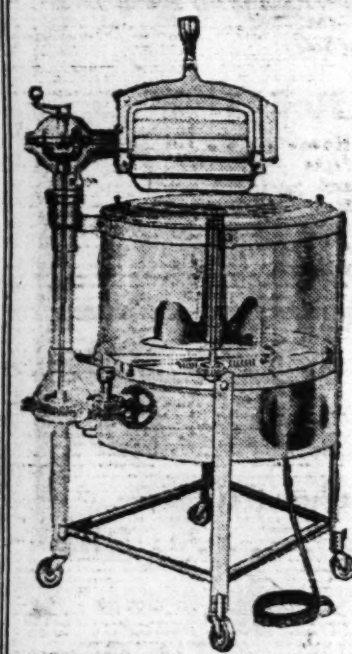

It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Keep Musterole handy—jars, tubes. All druggists.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Any COLD

That cold may lead to something serious, if neglected. The time to do something for it is now. Don't wait until it develops into bronchitis. Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin as soon as you feel a cold coming on. Or as soon as possible after it starts. Bayer Aspirin will head off or relieve the aching and feverish feeling—will stop the headache. And if your throat is affected, dissolve two or three tablets in a quarter-glassful of warm water, and gargle. This quickly soothes a sore throat and reduces inflammation and infection. Read proven directions for neuralgia, for rheumatism and other aches and pains. Genuine Bayer Aspirin is harmless to the heart.

BAYER ASPIRIN
Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacturers of Elberfeld, Germany.

350 FAMILIES MADE HOMELESS IN MISSOURI FLOOD

15,000 to 20,000 Acres of Farm Land Expected to Be Under Water in Dunklin County.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. KENNETT, Mo., Jan. 20.—The St. Francis River here today was higher than at any other time on record, 350 Dunklin County families were homeless. It is estimated that between 15,000 and 20,000 acres of farm land would be inundated.

There are four breaks in the levees along Dunklin County on the Missouri side and one break on the Arkansas side near Nimmons and through these the water is pouring in constantly increasing volumes.

Water yesterday spread through the town of Holcomb, of about 200 inhabitants. It is probable that almost every home will be flooded.

Hornersville, a town of 250 inhabitants, also will be flooded. An organization for the relief of the homeless families was being perfected by the local Red Cross under the supervision of Mrs. W. S. Bragg, local secretary, and Miss Marion Kiehl, field representative of the Midwestern division.

Although most families left the lowlands before their homes were completely surrounded by water, a few remained until they were marooned and had to be taken to higher ground in boats. It was 7 degrees below zero here last night and 20 degrees below the night before.

At Fisk, Mo., which is approximately 100 miles upstream from Kennett the river was back in its banks today. A mile of the Frisco Railroad tracks near Holcomb was reported to be under water.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — In many American cities, including St. Louis, the use of radio to catch criminals is being hindered or entirely prevented by the attitude of the Radio Corporation of America, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee was told today by Kenneth R. Cox, the radio engineer who first perfected a police radio alarm system.

Many Police Departments that are ready and eager to build and install this equipment have been deterred by threats of patent suits from the Radio Corporation, while others have been unable to pay the extortionate prices which the Radio Corporation charges for equipment, he said. In still other cities necessity has compelled the police to capitulate and pay the Radio Corporation's price, he testified.

St. Louis is in that class.

Cox himself has contracted to install the system in St. Louis. The apparatus will be purchased from one or more of the companies forming the Radio Corporation group.

Better System for Third.

He contended that a better system could be built for about one-third of what the St. Louis system will cost, but to build it not only would subject the city to being sued by the Radio Corporation, but might also prevent it from obtaining the parts necessary to operate the system, since the Radio Corporation has a monopoly on such parts.

The city of Detroit defied the Radio Corporation and went ahead and built its own system, Cox related, whereupon the Radio Corporation refused, and still refuses, to sell it the transmitting tubes that are vital to its operation. The city is compelled to beg tubes from local broadcasting systems, or to obtain them from "tube bootleggers," he said.

City Value of Alarm.

At one stage of the narrative, Wheeler of Montana exclaimed: "And this is the corporation which is organized for patriotic reasons."

Emphasizing the importance of the radio alarm in police work, Cox declared that since the system as installed in Detroit the number of burglaries has decreased 64 per cent, while the percentage of convictions had increased 45 per cent.

"Perhaps the greatest incentive to crime in modern times is the easy getaway," he explained. "It was made possible by a modern invention—the automobile. Now a still more modern invention—the radio—has appeared to furnish the answer. By the use of the radio alarm it has been possible to capture murderers before they could leave the scene of their crime. In numerous instances it has enabled the police to surprise bank robbers before they could get out of the banks."

"The principal thing standing in the way of its widespread use is the attitude of the Radio Corporation, which claims a patent monopoly on the equipment, and refuses to sell it except at prices that are almost prohibitive."

Started as Kid Amateur.

Cox, a tall, pleasant, self-possessed man of 33, said he got the idea of using radio to capture robbers "Back in the 'hazy days' when I was a kid amateur."

He tried to sell the idea to the Radio Corporation, but was unsuccessful. Then he persuaded the police of Detroit, where he lived, to let him install a system. While doing the job he was carried on the rolls as a patrolman, on a patrolman's salary.

The system consists of a transmitter at police headquarters and a number of police automobiles, each equipped with a set which instantly receives the messages sent out from headquarters. Of course, by assigning each car to a different district, it is possible to get policemen to the scene of a crime within a few minutes or a few seconds after the alarm is received at headquarters.

Emphasizing the importance of the radio alarm in police work, Cox declared that since the system was installed in Detroit the number of burglaries has decreased 54 per cent, while the percentage of convictions has increased 45 per cent.

POWERS AT HAGUE SIGN REPARATIONS PROTOCOL

German Payments Reduced from $100,000,000 to $9,000,000,000—Debt Disputes With Austria and Hungary Settled.

By the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 20.—The protocol adopting the Young plan was signed this afternoon at the second Hague reparations conference.

The document, which puts an end to 15 years of contention and negotiation over the reparations problem, consisted of 113 pages with 14 annexes and 20 separate agreements between the different powers.

It scales down the total reparations Germany must pay from the enormous claims presented at the peace conference, totaling $100,000,000,000 to a little less than $9,000,000,000, payable in 59 years.

It brings to an end the sanctions authorized by the treaty of Versailles in the eventuality of a default by Germany and throws the burden of deciding when Germany is in default upon the Court on International Justice. Only after this court has decided there is cause for action can any of Germany's creditors proceed to coercive measures.

presented his plan to the City Council.

"It is possible to build good 500-watt transmitters for less than $100 each, and it costs about $50 to equip each car with a receiver," he said. "My plan called for the construction of three transmitters, at a total cost of $25,000, and the equipment of 250 automobiles with receivers, at a total cost of $25,000. The City Council accepted the plan and appropriated $100,000 to build and install the system, and to operate it for the rest of that year (1929)."

Just as the work was to start, however, he was not familiar with the details of the proposed installation he felt quite sure it would infringe on some of the R. C. A. patents. Indeed, he gave a list of 15 patents which he felt probably would be infringed. His company, he said, was ready to furnish and install such equipment, and he wanted the city of Chicago against attempting to build its own. Commissioner Russell consulted the city's legal bureau, and was advised that if the work proceeded the city would be open to patent suits by the Radio Corporation.

Reply Is a Shock.
In the face of this threat, the city asked the Radio-Victor Corporation, and the Graybar Electric Corporation, a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Corporation (also a member of the R. C. A. patent combination), to quote prices on the desired equipment. The response was a good deal of a shock. On transmitters, the Radio-Victor price was $24,712 each, and Graybar's price was $24,980, while Radio-Victor asked $258 each for receivers, on which it claimed a monopoly.

These prices were far beyond the scope of any appropriation, Cox continued. "Police radio was at a standstill in Chicago, and Chicago needed it. Since the Chicago project was the most elaborate and complete that had been undertaken of the country were watching it. The prices that had been quoted by the manufacturers were prohibitive, and the result was to stop the development of police radio, not only in Chicago, but throughout the nation."

Eventually, by changing its specifications and accepting inferior equipment, he said, Chicago was able to purchase three transmitters from the Graybar company for $30,000, and the Radio Corporation has consented to sell receivers for $150 each.

Detroit Ignores R. C. A.
"How did Detroit get away with it?" inquired Senator Couzens, who once was Mayor of that city. "Detroit simply ignored the R. C. A.'s demands, and went ahead," Cox replied.

"Has it been sued?" inquired Senator Brookhart. "I am told that it is threatening to sue, and I know that the Radio Corporation refuses to sell Detroit the tubes that are necessary to operate the transmitters."

"How does it operate?" "The Police Department either buys tubes from local broadcasting stations, or buys them from sources that ostensibly obtain them from the R. C. A. for other purposes."

Cox said he had been retained to install a system in St. Louis. The arrangements are not ready to be disclosed, he said, but the city expects to purchase the apparatus.

The purchase would be either from the Radio Corporation, or from one of the companies forming the R. C. A. patent pool. They are: General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, American Telephone and Telegraph, Radio-Victor and the United Fruit Co.

Earlier in the hearing Chairman Couzens had told Le Roi Williams of the Grigby-Grunow Co. that he was astonished at the lack of courage among the competitors of the R. C. A.

"Every time the Radio Corporation points an empty pistol in the form of an unadjudicated patent at your head, you sign on the dotted line. Why don't you fight?" he asked. There was more than a little significance in the fact that Couzens asked the question. It was Couzens, who, as a partner of Henry Ford, led the fight that smashed the patent monopoly and resulted in the present system of cross-licensing to which the growth of the automobile industry has been largely attributed.

Calls It Tough Order.
Williams replied that taking on the R. C. A. combination was a pretty tough order. It is not merely the patents, valid and otherwise, that it owns, which makes it such an intimidating force—there is also the question of backing group having the largest financial resources of any group in the world.

"Nevertheless, it seems to me that what your industry needs more than anything else is courage," retorted the chairman. "I never heard a more pathetic story than the one that has been related here by you independent manufacturers. As soon as the Radio Corporation makes a threat, you throw up your hands and come crying to Congress for legislation to protect you. Why don't you fight?"

Williams suggested that the fighting spirit was a good thing, but it wasn't much consolation in bankruptcy.

CLASH IN ASSEMBLY IN INDIA
NEW DELHI, Jan. 20.—A dispute between British officials and East Indian politicians broke out at the opening of the Indian legislative assembly today.

J. V. Patel, East Indian president of the Assembly, declaring that orders of the Government of India had been issued in deliberate defiance of his own orders, said that certain instructions from Sir James Crear, home member of the Governor-General's executive Council, in effect substituted the authority of the Government of India for that of the chairman of the legislative Assembly. He ordered all galleries of the Assembly except the press gallery to be cleared and refused to allow Sir James Crear to speak on the subject.

30 Tribesmen Killed, 24 Hurt, 12 Captured.

TRIPOLI, Jan. 20.—Troops of the Duke Delle Puglie engaged in fight yesterday with Arab tribesmen outside Murzuk. The Arabs fled after a spirited engagement, leaving 30 dead and 24 wounded. Twelve were taken prisoners, among them one chieftain.

Italian losses were 18 wounded native soldiers. The Italians were aided by three airplanes. The Italians occupied Murzuk.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Jan. 20.—Twelve natives were killed and 29 injured yesterday in a tribal battle between Pondos and Shanganas in the Crown Mines compound.

DRY ACT VIOLATION MADE A CRIMINAL OFFENSE IN ARMY

Each Post Commander Made Responsible for Enforcement of Act Among Men Under Him.

LIQUOR BARRED IN CAMPS SINCE 1917

Stricter Regulations Ordered as Part of Hoover's Program to Stop Bootlegging in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The War Department disclosed today that army regulations have been amended to make any violation of the national prohibition laws a military offense.

Secretary Hurley said today that, although army regulations since 1917 had prohibited the possession of liquor on Government reservations, they made no specific reference to the national prohibition law passed in 1918.

The new army regulation, which was issued to all posts last October, charges the commanding officer of each military station with enforcement of the prohibition laws within his jurisdiction. It also extends army discipline, Hurley said, to any officer convicted by civil authorities of prohibition law violations or Government reservations.

The new regulation was issued, Hurley said, as the army's contribution to the administration's effort for stricter enforcement of prohibition. Its scope extends to army posts in the Philippines and wherever they may be outside the continental United States, even though there be no prohibition law in that country. It was pointed out, however, that the older army regulations made all these posts dry.

All Army Posts Garrisoned by U. S. Soldiers Must Be Dry.

MANILA, Jan. 20.—A War Department general order made public here requires strict enforcement of the national prohibition law at all army posts garrisoned by American soldiers. Seven reservations in the Philippine Islands are affected by the order, which is effective Feb. 11. Hereafter no liquor may be kept in quarters but the rule does not prohibit drinking off the post.

COUNTERVAILING CLAUSES OF TARIFF ELIMINATED
Coal, Gunpowder, Chloride Nitrate and Paper Board Included.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Senate today adopted amendments to the tariff bill to wipe out existing countervailing provisions relating to coal, gunpowder, calcium acetate, or chloride nitrate, pyramid, paper board, wall board and pulp board.

Elimination of countervailing clauses was proposed by Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee, who said the Senate had been informed him that the provisions had led to considerable "disadvantage and dissatisfaction."

The countervailing provisions authorize the United States Government to increase its tariffs on the products mentioned to the level of duties by other nations on similar products of this country.

All the products affected except paper board, wall board and pulp board, now dutiable at 10 per cent, are now on the American free list.

Approval was given to an amendment by Senator Walsh (Dem.), Massachusetts, to retain the present levy of 5 per cent on pulp board in rolls for use in the manufacture of wall board. The House and Finance Committee bills proposed an increase to 10 per cent.

The Senate approved a rate of 25 cents a pound and 50 per cent ad valorem on finished wall board hats. This is the same duty agreed on last week for hat bodies and forms of wool felt, which represents a slight increase over present rates on the unfinished articles.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, Jan. 20.—The Kenilworth Castle, with the Prince of Wales and his party aboard, arrived here today. A 50-mile sail had delayed the ship at Table Bay. All aboard were well.

The Prince will remain in Cape town for a few days before continuing to the interior of Africa where he will resume the hunt for big game and the tour of Britain's African possessions interrupted when illness of his father called him back to England a year ago.

SHAW REGRETS SLAUGHTER OF ANIMALS IN HIS HONOR

Playwright Makes a Vegetarian Answer to Invitation to New York Dinner.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The defiant spirit of George Bernard Shaw prevailed last night at the dinner in his honor given by the Town Club at Town Hall.

Archibald Henderson, biographer of the playwright and toastmaster for the occasion, said he had invited Shaw to attend—a mere gesture, because Shaw has persistent refusal to visit the United States. He read Shaw's reply, which emphasized the playwright's vegetarianism. Shaw wrote:

"How terrible! I am to be made the pretext for killing all those wretched animals and birds and fish! Thank you for nothing. Now if it were to be a fast instead of a feast, say a solemn three-day abstention from corpses in my honor, I could at least pretend to believe that it was disinterested. Blood sacrifices are not in my line."

PREDICTS PEACE-TIME CONSTRUCTION RECORD

Commerce Secretary Thinks $10,000,000 Will Be Spent This Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—An expenditure of more than $10,000,000 for public and private construction work throughout the nation is expected during the coming year by Secretary of Commerce Lamont.

Responding to President Hoover's campaign for stabilizing business and stimulating construction, the Commerce Department has been collecting data on prospective building in all parts of the country.

These reports indicate that more than $7,000,000,000 will be spent in public building and maintenance and in public utility construction, an outlay that would establish a new peace-time record. Expenditures for commercial and industrial structures are expected to exceed $2,000,000,000 on the basis of last year's building.

Complete returns have been received from 26 States and incomplete returns and estimates from all the others, indicating an expenditure for public works, including those of the Federal Government, of approximately $2,325,000,000.

It is estimated that public utilities, railroads and telegraph companies will spend $2,500,000,000 for compound yesterday used knives, stones and clubs to vent their wrath in a tribal battle on imported laborers from Pondoland.

Twelve natives were killed and twenty nine were injured. Police for a time were unable to control the combatants. Several arrests have been made.

FOREIGN CONSULS SUBJECT TO STATE DIVORCE COURTS

Supreme Court So Rules on Appeal by Hungarian Official at Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Consular officers of foreign governments serving here were held by the Supreme Court today to be subject to the jurisdiction of State courts in divorce suits, the question having been presented in the Popovitch case from Cleveland, O.

The controversy arose when John C. Popovitch, Hungarian Vice Consul at Cleveland, was sued in the State court of Stark County, O., for divorce and alimony. Popovitch contended that under the Federal Constitution the Federal courts had exclusive jurisdiction over all suits against Ambassadors, Ministers and consular officers.

The judges on the Stark County Common Pleas Court entertained the suit on the ground that the constitutional provision did not apply to civil cases against diplomatic and consular officers.

IMPORTED WORKERS ATTACKED
12 Killed in Clash of African Mine Laborers.

By the Associated Press.

JOHANNESBURG, Union of South Africa, Jan. 20.—Native Shanganas in the Crown Mines compound yesterday used knives, stones and clubs to vent their wrath in a tribal battle on imported laborers from Pondoland.

Twelve natives were killed and twenty nine were injured. Police for a time were unable to control the combatants. Several arrests have been made.

The negotiations for settlement recently reached a stage where the Bolivians were to agree to return Fort Bogueron, which they took as a counter-measure, and the Paraguayans to return Fort Vanguardia. Neither of the two nations were willing to be first in complying with the terms of the agreement, however, and matters hung there while public sentiment in both countries against the other became warmer.

BOLIVIAN FORCES MAKE ATTACK ON PARAGUAYAN FORT

Surprise Skirmish on Island Isla Poi Reported to Have Taken Place Last Thursday.

ONE MAN ON EACH SIDE IS KILLED

Invasions Said to Have Been Repelled—Both States Recently Concluded Treaty in Boundary Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Jan. 20.—Grave concern was felt here today because of Government advice that Bolivian troops had attacked the Paraguayan fort of Isla Poi, on an island in the Paraguayan River, about 350 miles northwest of here. The council of ministers met today to consider the situation. The attack occurred last Thursday, but beyond sparse official information details were lacking. The Bolivians were said here to have attacked and to have been dispersed.

The Ministry of War issued the following statement: "The officer commanding the Fourth Infantry Regiment informs the Ministry of War that at 3 p. m. last Thursday a Bolivian military patrol made a surprise attack on the Paraguayan fort, Isla Poi, otherwise known as Fort Cacique Ramon."

"Latest reports state that one soldier was killed on each side, the attackers were repulsed and dispersed. The Paraguayans continue in possession of Fort Isla Poi. The same report states that the Bolivians continue patrolling the sector, but otherwise there have been no new developments."

Previous reports received here said that the Bolivians had been routed, and that they had retreated to Bogueron, scene of previous disturbance. The attacking party was said to have spent some time prior to their attack spying on the fort.

The attack occurred at a time when Bolivia and Paraguay were attempting to adjust their differences over the vast territory known as the Chaco Boreal through a conciliation commission agreed on last year after a Paraguayan attack on the Bolivian Fort Vanguardia.

The negotiations for settlement recently reached a stage where the Bolivians were to agree to return Fort Bogueron, which they took as a counter-measure, and the Paraguayans to return Fort Vanguardia. Neither of the two nations were willing to be first in complying with the terms of the agreement, however, and matters hung there while public sentiment in both countries against the other became warmer.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM
I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles: that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the rights of the people, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Police Brutality.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
RECENTLY two men were shot to death by police officers, and a 19-year-old boy was brutally beaten by four or five officers, then haled before Judge Rosecan who, after hearing the evidence, promptly and justly rebuked the Captain and his men for the unjustified attack on this mere lad.
One of the men killed was a mendicant and had gone into the Illinois Traction depot to warm himself, when an altercation between him and the officer stationed at the depot arose. He was promptly shot and killed. We do not know if shooting was necessary, or if the officer had been put in danger of his life, but be the facts as they may, the poor beggar was unarmed and was not harming anyone. The true he might have solicited alms. But in these hard times many beggars are seen in our midst, and stretching our imagination, if shooting was necessary, wouldn't a shot in the leg have sufficed instead of death?
The other death was that of a young boy, 11 years old, with no record of a conviction, evidently playing some sort of prank at a place on South Broadway. A disturbance in such a neighborhood should be taken with a grain of salt and most certainly did not deserve a shot to the death case.
These cases should be carefully scrutinized and investigated and I hope your paper will lead the way. JUSTICE.

Concrete vs. Asphalt.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
REFERRING to "Engineer's" letter of Jan. 6 urging the use of concrete in street paving:
The big outstanding fact that America's largest cities, including New York, overwhelmingly prefer asphalt to concrete pavements and that not a yard of concrete is laid in Manhattan is omitted from the letter. In America's seven largest cities—namely, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cleveland, St. Louis and Boston—the area of asphalt pavements in service on Jan. 1, 1928, was 108,700,000 square yards, while Portland cement concrete pavements aggregated only 5,122,118 square yards, or less than one-twenty-first of the total asphalt yardage. If concrete is the popular choice of cities today rather than asphalt, it appears passing strange that during the 11 months from Jan. 1 to Dec. 1, 1929, the falling off in the yardage of concrete awards in municipalities as compared with 1928, was 6,794,104 square yards, or about 14.25 per cent, while the asphalt yardage showed a gain of about 6 per cent.

Objects to Church's Plan.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
REFERRING to the recent recommendation made by the Methodist church that if necessary our Government should appropriate $100,000,000 for the enforcement of prohibition:
This money is appropriate in municipalities as compared with 1928, was 6,794,104 square yards, or about 14.25 per cent, while the asphalt yardage showed a gain of about 6 per cent.

Thanks Girls Prompted For Parley.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
A WOMAN reporter, writing in a London newspaper, expresses amazement at the manner in which the American girl typist, accompanying Secretary Stimson to the naval conference, were dressed. "Nearly all of them wore coats," she says, and "in England it is only actresses who look so smart and striking." Then, one of the young women wore the shrewdest of silk stockings. The English working triplet would probably stride through them in half an hour.
Poor reporting. Very poor reporting. What young American woman, we'd like to know, granted a trip to England, wouldn't stretch it a little to wear her best pair of stockings when she got off the ship and made her way to London? What young American woman, granted such a journey, wouldn't even her typewriter and her great-grandmother's diamond bracelet to take a fur coat as companion? Still, the English reporter sees in this display of feminine smartness the every-day attire of our nation's ruffians. In the words of Alfred Smith, "Boy."

THE DISFRANCHISED CITIES.

In the census of 1930 the urban population of the United States for the first time exceeded the rural population. That is, more than 50 per cent of the people of the United States are now living in cities and towns of 2500 or more.

Presumably the cities and towns should therefore run the country. How far they are prevented from doing so is shown by Orville Welsh in an article reprinted in part on this page from the January number of Plain Talk. Senator Blaine of Wisconsin has introduced a resolution that Congress vote on the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. His design is to put Congress on record. He says he is quite aware that the prohibitionists have a majority in both House and Senate. Is this because there are more prohibitionists in the United States than there are anti-prohibitionists? There is no proof that this is the case.

It is because we have what Mr. Welsh characterizes as government by acreage. He cites the city of St. Louis as an example. One vote in the Ozarks is worth five votes in St. Louis. In many of the states the eighteenth amendment was ratified by rotten borough legislatures over the heads of urban communities in the rural districts. Maryland was a typical illustration. Baltimore has more than half the population of the State. Her delegation is only 23.5 per cent of the Legislature. The rotten borough Legislature of West Maryland ratified the eighteenth amendment. In Delaware the city of Wilmington, with 50 per cent of the voting population of the State, has only 12.5 per cent representation in the General Assembly. Mr. Welsh says this is why Delaware has so strict a dry enforcement code that physicians are not allowed to prescribe whisky for pneumonia patients.

It is because of this situation that the Blaine resolution is foredoomed. If the Government were as the Founders designed it there would be enough Representatives of urban communities to pass it, at least in the lower house of Congress. The prohibitionists know this, and to perpetuate rotten borough government is part of their strategy. In a reapportionment fight, either in the nation or the states, they are always found upon the side of the status quo. It is one of their boasts that they are a majority in Congress and among the states, but they are not a majority in fact. In Illinois rotten borough government has deprived the city of Chicago of her deserved representation in the State Legislature. When it was proposed to amend the constitution to give her justice, the people down-state defeated the proposal. The census of 1930 will show an even greater preponderance of urban population. Reapportionment upon the basis of the new census will therefore materially change the wet and dry line-up in the House. Mr. Welsh thinks the wet gains may be in excess of 100 seats. Naturally reapportionment was a bitter pill to the prohibitionists. Their reluctance to vote for it exposed the speciousness of their claim that the last presidential election showed them in a majority. It did not, of course, show anything of the sort. If they believed it did they would not have held on to the rotten borough system in the House, and they would not continue to hold on to it in many of the states.

The situation in the United States Senate is in denial of the first fundamental of true popular government. It is the price we paid to get the colonies into the Union. New York, with approximately 10,000,000 people, has two votes in the Senate. Nevada, with 77,407 people, also has two votes. Wyoming, Utah, Vermont, New Hampshire, Arizona and North Dakota, with a total population of approximately 3,000,000, or less than one-third that of New York, have 14 votes in the United States Senate. This was one of the telling points made by Mr. Taft in his famous letters opposing the eighteenth amendment. He foresaw that it would become a contest between urban and rural communities, and that the efforts of the rural minority to hold their advantage against the urban majority would subject to great strain the structure of the Government itself. This is precisely what has happened. The Federal Constitution says there must be a congressional reapportionment every 10 years. No such reapportionment was ordered by Congress until nine years after the census of 1930, and then only after great pressure had been brought upon it by the country.

Such is the plight of the cities of the United States. They are disfranchised in their own states, and they are disfranchised in the nation.
REPORT ON A REFORM.
Calendar reform is making a certain amount of progress. It is being fostered by an organization with the imposing title, National Committee on Calendar Simplification. Two surveys held last year sent sentiment for a change among business men. Several business houses, including Sears-Roebuck and the Eastman Kodak Co. (whose founder, George Eastman, is father of the scheme) have actually put into operation a new calendar of 13 months of four weeks each.
In the meantime, the public seems to have filed away the proposal in the no-hum pigeonhole. What little thought has been given to the idea is divided between joyful anticipation of more paydays and a counteracting dread of a thirteenth rent bill. But speaking of reforms, what has become of the one which would substitute the metric system for our unscientific and antiquated table of weights and measures? When that is achieved, we will be more optimistic about the possibility of realizing calendar reform.

SHARP PRACTICE.
The Georgia Power Co. has used advertising effectively in acquiring "more than 40 municipal electric plants" in that State. Its practice, as related to the Federal Trade Commission by the president of the company, Preston S. Arkwright, was to explain the advantages of the proposed transaction in published statements "signed by citizens," with nothing to indicate that the company had had anything to do with the statements. So far as the people of the community knew, the statements expressed the individual judgment of their fellow citizens who had signed them. Mr. Arkwright admitted to the Commission that the company really ought to pay for such advertising, even in towns where the sales campaigns had been unsuccessful.

The company ought to do more than pay those bills. It ought to sign such sales talks itself. The citizens whose names appear in such printing are dummies. The deception is obvious. The practice is, in effect, an attempt to influence public opinion by hired wretches. There is no fine point of ethics involved.

It would not be a case of leaning backward on the company's part to sponsor its own arguments. Its failure to do so is indefensible.

Of similar stripe is the company's practice, as admitted by Mr. Arkwright, of anonymously financing propaganda against the Ontario Government's hydro-electric operations. Such concealment is marked by both dishonesty and hypocrisy.

The Georgia Power Co. besides getting out its check-book, might well fumigate its business morals.

OUR SHORT FORESIGHT.

In his new book, "America and England," giving the background of economic resources, productivity, finance, organization and naval power of Great Britain and the United States, Nicholas Roosevelt, for many years in the diplomatic service, cites the advantages and disadvantages in detail of each nation. In the American table of disadvantages he puts "lack of tropical products."

The United States now imports $2,000,000,000 worth of tropical products for food and materials for industry. We are dependent upon other nations for many necessities. The British Empire produces over 90 per cent of rubber and we consume 75 per cent of all rubber produced. We get our guanine from the Dutch; our camphor, used in film and pyrolytic industries, from Formosa, a Japanese possession; gutta serena from British possessions and paper pulp from alien territories. As our population increases, industries grow, and when our own resources are exhausted, we shall become more and more dependent upon other nations for the necessities of life and industry.

We have had for over 30 years an exceptional opportunity to produce practically all the tropical and semi-tropical products which we need. We have had the Philippines, with unmeasured possibilities of production in rich, undeveloped soil and virgin forests. We have Hawaii and Porto Rico, but they are insignificant in area and resources compared with the Philippines.

In the Philippines, with an all-year-round summer climate, are 35,000,000 acres of fertile, undeveloped lands. On these lands can be raised sugar, tobacco, the best hemp in the world, rubber, coffee and many other kinds of tropical and semi-tropical products. There is more than 50,000 square miles of virgin forests, with 500 varieties of trees, mostly excellent lumber. In addition to lumber there are minor forest products, such as copal, resins, oils, rattan, tanbarks, medicines. Coconut trees supply food and copra for oils in demand everywhere. Paper pulp can be made from the trees and fibers of plants. Coffee grows wild. The forests are not difficult to reach because they are on islands, with water all around them.

Those who have studied the resources of the Philippines and their slow economic development are amazed at American neglect of opportunity to obtain ample supplies of products that we lack which will become more useful and profitable in the future. Regardless of the question of political independence the opportunity is there. We have developed Philippine politics, but overlooked economic development which the Philippines need as much as we do. Why not make use of our natural bonanza? Our foresight is short.

A DANGEROUS DOCTRINE.

At the national convention of the Anti-Saloon League in Detroit, Methodist Bishop Thomas Nicholson, taking note of the fact that "the wet forces tried to keep the church out of politics," said:
I am proud to say that the evangelical churches have abandoned the practice of talking only of the other world and have adopted the policy of watching the kingdom of this world.

In other words, the practical union of church and state which has been effected by the prohibitionists now receives theological sanction. It remains to be sanctioned, however, by the masses of the people who still cling to the old American—and Christian—principle that we must render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. Among the things that are Caesar's is responsibility for making and enforcing the laws of the land.

If the churches are wise, they will condemn the pernicious doctrine of Bishop Nicholson, and confine their work to the spiritual field. Much of the bloodshed of history has resulted from church interference in temporal affairs.

THE FARM BOARD'S SURVEY.

The Federal Farm Board seems to know what it wants to do and how to do it. Announcement has just been made of a survey it purposes to make of local farmers' co-operatives in the New England states and New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia. It intends to ascertain in detail the volume of business done by these organizations, their financial condition and operating costs.

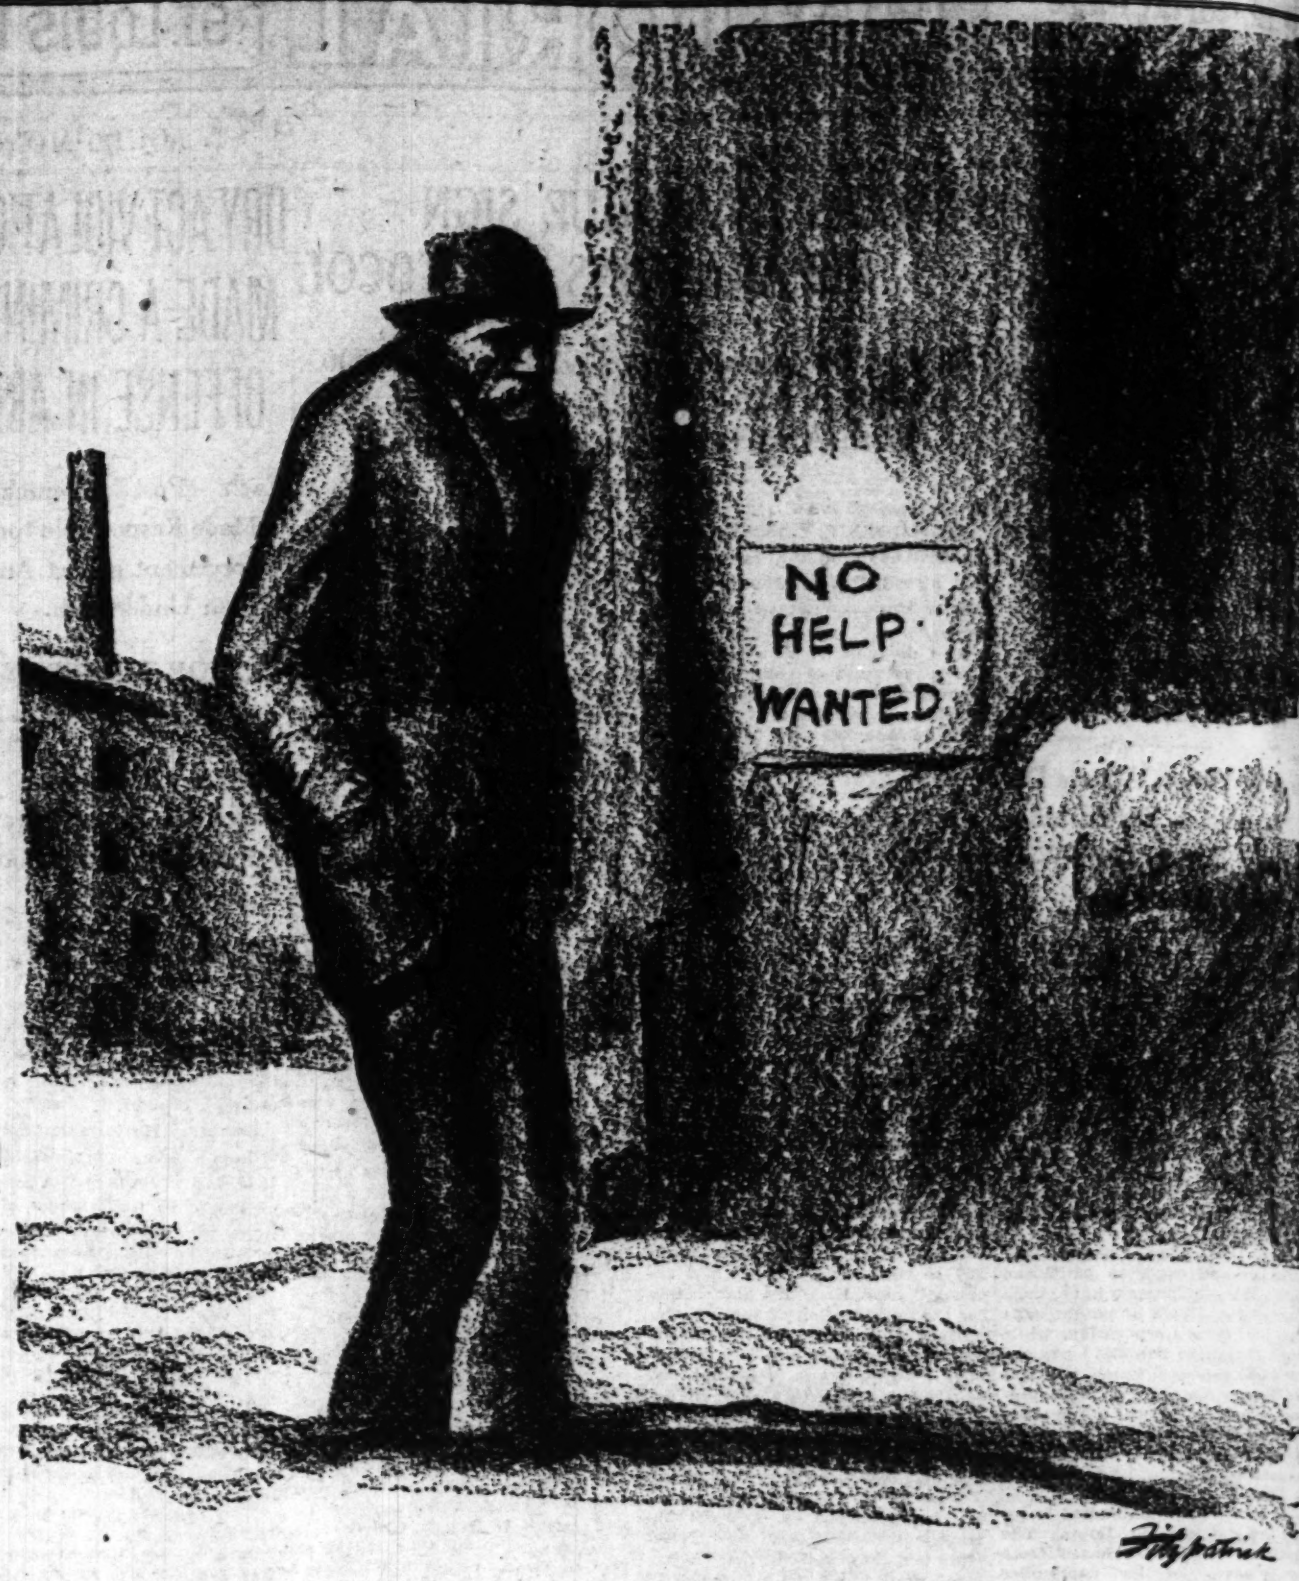

It is a prosaic, laborious plan of inventorying, so to speak, the marketing processes of the farmers of those states. Similar investigation, presumably, will be conducted in other parts of the country. When the survey of the whole country will have been completed, the Federal Farm Board will have accumulated a valuable body of knowledge concerning farmers' co-operatives and will be able to proceed intelligently with the work of putting them on an efficient basis.

The Federal Farm Board has already impressed itself upon public opinion. This latest enterprise will add to its reputation as a commission of energetic, expert specialists.

THE STANLEY MCCORMICK CASE.

Judge William Dakin has settled the Stanley McCormick case by ordering cessation of psychoanalysis treatment of the incompetent millionaire, and by providing for the appointment of two more guardians. In the spectacular trial of this case, it developed that Dr. Edward J. Kempf, New York psychoanalyst, was being paid a salary of $150,000 a year for his services. McCormick's widow, who brought the action, complained her husband's fortune was being dissipated, his affection for her alienated and that no improvement was being made in his condition.

It may be interesting in this connection that Dr. Sigmund Freud, father of psychoanalysis, has never urged its use in the case of the severer insanities, or psychoses, but confined it to the neuroses and other milder mental disturbances. Apparently his followers in this country are more optimistic as to the value of psychoanalysis than the man who invented it.

A REFORM WE MIGHT BETTER BE WORKING ON.

Government by Acreage

Rotten borough system, abolished in England, persists here; for instance, one vote in Nevada is worth more than 134 in New York State; due to favoring of rural districts, gerrymanders in states discriminate against cities; one ballot in Ozarks equals five in St. Louis; situation is form of "taxation without representation."

Orville Welsh in Plain Talk.

EVERYBODY knows about the rotten boroughs that existed in British government up to a century ago when the non-existent town of Old Sarum returned two members to the House of Commons, and young, thriving cities like Birmingham none. Since then in Britain as well as in most other civilized countries of the world electoral inequalities have in the main been abolished, and only a very small percentage of the people had any voting voice even in local government. Legislative representation generally was fixed arbitrarily by the state constitution then adopted, without any allowance for the subsequent growth of the towns. In only one-third of the early American states was population taken as a basis for any legislative apportionment.

If we believe in democracy, how justify the rotten boroughs of making treaties, abolishing Cabinets, picking or ousting life-term Judges, and amending the Constitution, one vote in Nevada is worth more than 134 in New York? Even in the election of a President, Nevada has nine times as many votes as New York. "Each state," says the Constitution, "shall appoint a number of electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the state may be entitled in Congress." So New York has 45 electors, one for 230,721 people; Nevada has three, one for every 55,592.

The House of Representatives is supposed to be representative of the country as a whole. It is not. Even if Congress obeyed the Constitution and reapportioned the House according to the decennial census—which it has refused to do since 1910—it still would be heavily weighted in favor of the rural regions.

Not far to seek. The Congressional districts in each state are laid out by the Legislature; if the Legislature has a rural bias, what easier than to cheat the cities by gerrymandering? That is exactly what happened.

Now at best, under our Federal system, the United States is far from being a democracy; but what a mammoth but—some precautions against majority rule are also imbedded in most of our state constitutions, which repeat and magnify all the defects of a rigid Federal instrument. In virtually all the populous states the cards are stacked by law against the minority political party, and especially against any independent political movement.

In the "nationally Republican" states of the North and East, the Democrats, as the minority party, get short shrift in legislative representation. Aside from gerrymandering, the criteria Democratic in the main or liberal, are rankly and frankly discriminated against in apportionment, so that a vote from the ultra-conservative rural community is worth several times that of the radical townsmen. The same condition exists in the Democratic South as against any possible minority party. In the West also the political machinery has been manipulated to produce some of the worst phases of the rotten borough system.

This situation has become vitally important because of the immense turnover in the last few years from a country predominantly rural to one much more than half urban. Political power is retained by the rural minority very largely to the detriment of the cities and certainly without regard to the welfare and wishes of their inhabitants. This population turnover in the decade ended with the 1920 census, the last for which figures are available, was something like 14,000,000 persons, or an average of 1-600,000 a year. There has been no indication of any slowing up of this trend in the last 10 years.

What has been the general result of rotten borough rule? Why, city residents, knowing that the vote was worth only a fraction of those of their country cousins in legislative elections, can but regard with contempt the Comstockian and tyrannical laws imposed upon them, and they have very definitely refused to obey them—just as our colonial forefathers revolted at "taxation without representation."

Take, for instance, Illinois. Chicago is an imperial city ruled by the provinces. Cook County (Chicago), with more than half the State's population, has only 19 of the 31 Senators at Springfield, and 31 of the 154 Representatives. It was such a rotten borough Legislature that ratified the eighteenth amendment and inflicted a dry enforcement law on a commonwealth very wet in sentiment and practice. Incidentally Cook County has only 19 of the State's present 25 Congressmen; at least three less than it is entitled to.

The situation in Illinois is certainly partly responsible for Chicago's bloody beer-gang warfare. The City Council despairing of getting a voice for America's second largest city at Springfield, was unanimous in adopting a resolution looking to the separation of Chicago and adjacent territory from the rest of Illinois and its formation into a separate State. This movement had echoes in the other Great Lakes cities. Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo.

In Missouri one vote in the Ozarks equals five in St. Louis. Constitutional provisions for reapportionment have been ignored by the Missouri Legislature since 1901.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.

IF this Congress is called upon to do whether the Philippines Islands are to be granted their independence—and it looks now as if it will—a great deal will be heard about Henry Allen Cooper.
Cooper is the tall, frank-coated Representative from Wisconsin who first came to Washington to serve in the Fifty-third Congress, back in 1893. His hair and beard are snow white now, for he has become the oldest member in the House in point of years as well as one of the oldest in point of years.
He has served in every Congress but one since 1893. In 1918 he was defeated as a result of an attack on his war record. Cooper's physical appearance, along with his belief that one star salary was enough to carry, picked the dainty Miss Miller for the cast and left Errol flat on his funny legs elsewhere. The part of the Duke reduced to being a waiter in New York in the hands of Joe Brown. Mr. Brown is funny enough, but he is not an Errol as it is only when Miss Miller is on the stage that he is lifted out of the ranks of being just another musical picture. As he is there more of the time, however, singing and dancing, the piece moves swiftly and entertainingly, and the costumes and the color are daintily beautiful.

COOPER'S interest in the Philippines' fight for independence dates back to a June afternoon of 1902. He had just come from a committee meeting called to decide whether the islands were ready for an elective House of Representatives. For long hours he had sat listening to sweeping condemnations of all Filipinos as savages and barbarians.
Strolling down Pennsylvania avenue from the Capitol on his way home, he passed in front of a book shop. He was attracted by the colorful jacket of a novel in the window, and asked to see it. It was Dr. Jose Rizal's "Noli Me Tangere," the novel which first awakened in the Filipinos' souls a desire for freedom from Spain. He bought the book, took it home, and read it at one sitting.

The next day Cooper took the floor of the House. He read Rizal's poem, "My Last Farewell," written, just before a Filipino was shot by the Spaniards for high treason. And he concluded his speech with an impassioned plea for the Filipino which was both eloquent and convincing.

FOR more than a week he crusaded. Craft as well as oratorical fervor marked his flight. He refused the Speaker's request to limit his address for a 10-minute period, although the House had passed the resolution granting a Philippine House of Representatives.

He knew of the Senate opposition, and was aware that the chamber which first submitted these names would lose possession of the bill. In this holding out, he kept the question alive, finally winning a favorable joint committee report by a slim majority of two.

Cooper has kept a keen eye on developments in the most recent move for Philippine independence.
NOTE ON ORATORY.

"EVERY speech," says a K. C. with special reference to after-dinner oratory, "should have a beginning, a middle and an end." We ourselves are not convinced that the beginning and the middle are indispensable.

A Frail Lady

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF LADY HAMILTON. By Albert Flament. Translated by Louis Arthur Cunningham. (Louis Carrier & Co.)
At a time when private lives are being brought out and dusted off and held up to public scrutiny for such edification as may be expected that the private life of Lady Hamilton would be overlooked, even though she was a private life never was extremely private in the sense of being hidden.

It is quite a well known fact that in 1793, both before and after she became Lady Hamilton, she was a very attractive person. More promiscuous, probably, than has been generally known, because Emma was that part of a person.

In that view of the case, "The Private Life of Lady Hamilton" is a promise that is not fulfilled for the author has not discovered any new instances of the lady's misbehavior. Lacking light upon such instances, this author, unlike some others who deal in private lives, has not taken it upon himself to embellish his narrative with imaginary and doubtful details. So that anyone with a taste for private lives who looks to Albert Flament for additional revelation in the case of Lady Hamilton will be disappointed. He gives us the same beautiful but frail Emma that history has given us, with only a shifting of emphasis as to the contribution of newness to the old.

Emma Lyon, as will be remembered, was a very ordinary person in her origin, for her father was a blacksmith and her mother was a housemaid, but she was born beautiful and acquired graces that enabled her, after an apprenticeship as a housemaid, to become a lady. In an ascending scale of gentility, until she became Lady Hamilton, the friend and confidante of a Queen and the wielder of great influence.

Having ascended so far, in a social sense she started her descent by turning from her husband to the one-armed and one-eyed Nelson. After Trafalgar she slipped faster and faster and landed at last on the level from which she had risen, or lower—in want, imprisoned for debt, exiled to the garrets of Calais, dying there at the age of 33.

That is the private life of Lady Hamilton, as retold by this author, and if she were here she would have no just cause to complain of Libral.

The Week's News

By NIE

WITH lots of colored photography, the best of which is of Marilyn Miller, very pink and very blond, "Bally," at the Missouri, is a dandy film version of Ziegfeld's musical comedy, a stage show thoroughly familiar to St. Louis theatergoers. The name always linked with this play, however, is missing, for it was Leon Errol who put "Bally" on the road to fame. The movie makes one believe that one star salary was enough to carry, picked the dainty Miss Miller for the cast and left Errol flat on his funny legs elsewhere. The part of the Duke reduced to being a waiter in New York in the hands of Joe Brown. Mr. Brown is funny enough, but he is not an Errol as it is only when Miss Miller is on the stage that he is lifted out of the ranks of being just another musical picture. As he is there more of the time, however, singing and dancing, the piece moves swiftly and entertainingly, and the costumes and the color are daintily beautiful.

The Course of True Love.

BY the time "Their Own Desire" comes to an end everybody in the cast gets their wish, for a while at least. Lewis Stone, who has a wife waiting for him at home, is allowed a couple of reels to snatch some love making on the side with Helene Millard. Norma Shearer, who is Mr. Stone's daughter, in the film, has to wait until almost the end of the picture to get her own "Their Own Desire," who is Helene Millard's son, but she gets him, and at the same time Lewis finds out that his wife wants him back, and so everyone is happy in their own desire, except, perhaps, Miss Millard. You see, it's a pretty complicated affair, this picture at Lewis', with the sines of the parents hanging over the love affairs of their children. It takes a storm of scenes, maybe it was just a bit of an over-turned canoe and a reported drowning to set things right. Miss Shearer, even when she goes boating in the storm, wears the "Their Own Desire" will satisfy the ladies by its sartorial appeal, at least.

A Week in Blighly.

"SEVEN DAYS LEAVE," at the Ambassador advertises Gary Cooper as the star when, as a matter of fact, Gary has very little to do but look tall and get killed in the war in the end. The real headline of the picture is Beryl Mercer, who plays a lone-wolf, childless, old London woman who—decides her neighborly intentions that she has a son at the front. She picks out a name at random from a list of soldiers, lights on Gary's, and then he comes back, the seven days' leave and makes her happy for a week before he returns to France to stop a machine gun.

FURMAN DEFEATS DETROIT STARS IN FEATURE SILVER SKATES EVENT

MISS NEITZEL, MICHIGAN ACE, IS WINNER IN TRIO OF RACES; CROWD IS ESTIMATED AT 35,000

By W. J. McGoogan

Miss Loreta Neitzel, star Detroit woman skater, is back home today with the honor of having won three events in the fifth annual Silver Skates Carnival at Forest Park yesterday, and also with the realization that she was raced merely for exercise. All of the women's events were for Missouri skaters only, and although they finished behind the Detroit skater, two St. Louis girls were awarded first prizes.

Miss Neitzel captured the 220-yard, 440-yard and 880-yard races and in each instance her triumph was an easy one. First prize, however, went to Miss Charlean Power in the 220 and to Miss Lillian Hayes in the 440 and the 880, although Miss Power was second to Miss Neitzel in the 220, while Miss Hayes was second in the 440 and third in the 880. Another Detroit woman, Miss Fay Wettlaufer, finished second in the 880.

Detroit men stars fared better since there were some open races. They ran away with two of the three races, Eddie Wedge winning the mile with Melvin Johnson second, while Johnson won the two-mile with Wedge second and Fred Wettlaufer third.

Furman Springs Surprise. Adolph Furman of the Winter Garden, surprised the Detroiters when he jumped out in front in the 220 and held the lead all the way to capture the event.

The five Detroiters were the only out-of-town entrants in the annual ice spectacle held under the auspices of the Missouri Skating Association. Officials estimated that between 35,000 and 50,000 persons witnessed the races. But they probably had in mind all the transients who dropped by to see what it was all about for there did not appear to be more than 15,000 grouped around the course in Grand Basin at any one time.

There were enough automobiles in the park, however, to convey 50,000 persons. At least that is the way it seemed to those who had to park their cars near the zoo and trudge through the snow to the lagoon. Traffic near the course was badly congested.

Brands and Dubinsky Tie. The results of the Missouri Skating Association races which decide the winner of the Silver Skates emblematic of the Missouri championship, provided no champion for Otto Brands and Harold Dubinsky tied for first place with 60 points each.

The first place is awarded 30 points, a second 20 and a third 10. So Brands and Dubinsky will have to divide the skates.

Brands took the mile and the two miles events easily while Adolph Furman won the 220, duplicating his feat in the open event. Dubinsky was third in each of the three events while Ralph Prinz was third in the 220; Harry Furman third in the mile and Chick Mohrapp was third in the two-mile race.

Melvin Dubinsky and Lamar Otten provided some excitement when they finished in a tie for first place in the intermediate 440-yard race and attempted to race it off. Dubinsky came tearing down the inside track to the finish in the race off but appeared to hold Otten back when that individual was about to pass him.

Both Men Disqualified. Dubinsky was at first disqualified for fouling, then the officials decided that Otten also was guilty of foul racing so they were both disqualified and the race declared no contest. Dubinsky set up an awful howl at the ruling, then he set down on the ice in an effort to show the officials that he had been done a great wrong but the hearts of the officials, as cold as the ice, merely called the contestants for the next race.

Dubinsky won the 220-yard intermediate with Otten second, while Otten won the intermediate mile with Dubinsky second. James Mackey won the Junior 440-yard event and Jerry Cohen took the Juvenile 440. Lillian Hayes and Adolph Furman won the couples race.

Two hockey teams made up of members of the St. Louis Flyers gave a short hockey exhibition in which a team captained by Curly Healdy defeated one led by Coach Moore Jamison 3 to 2. Two amateur teams, the Kaufmanns and the Winter Gardens also gave an exhibition.

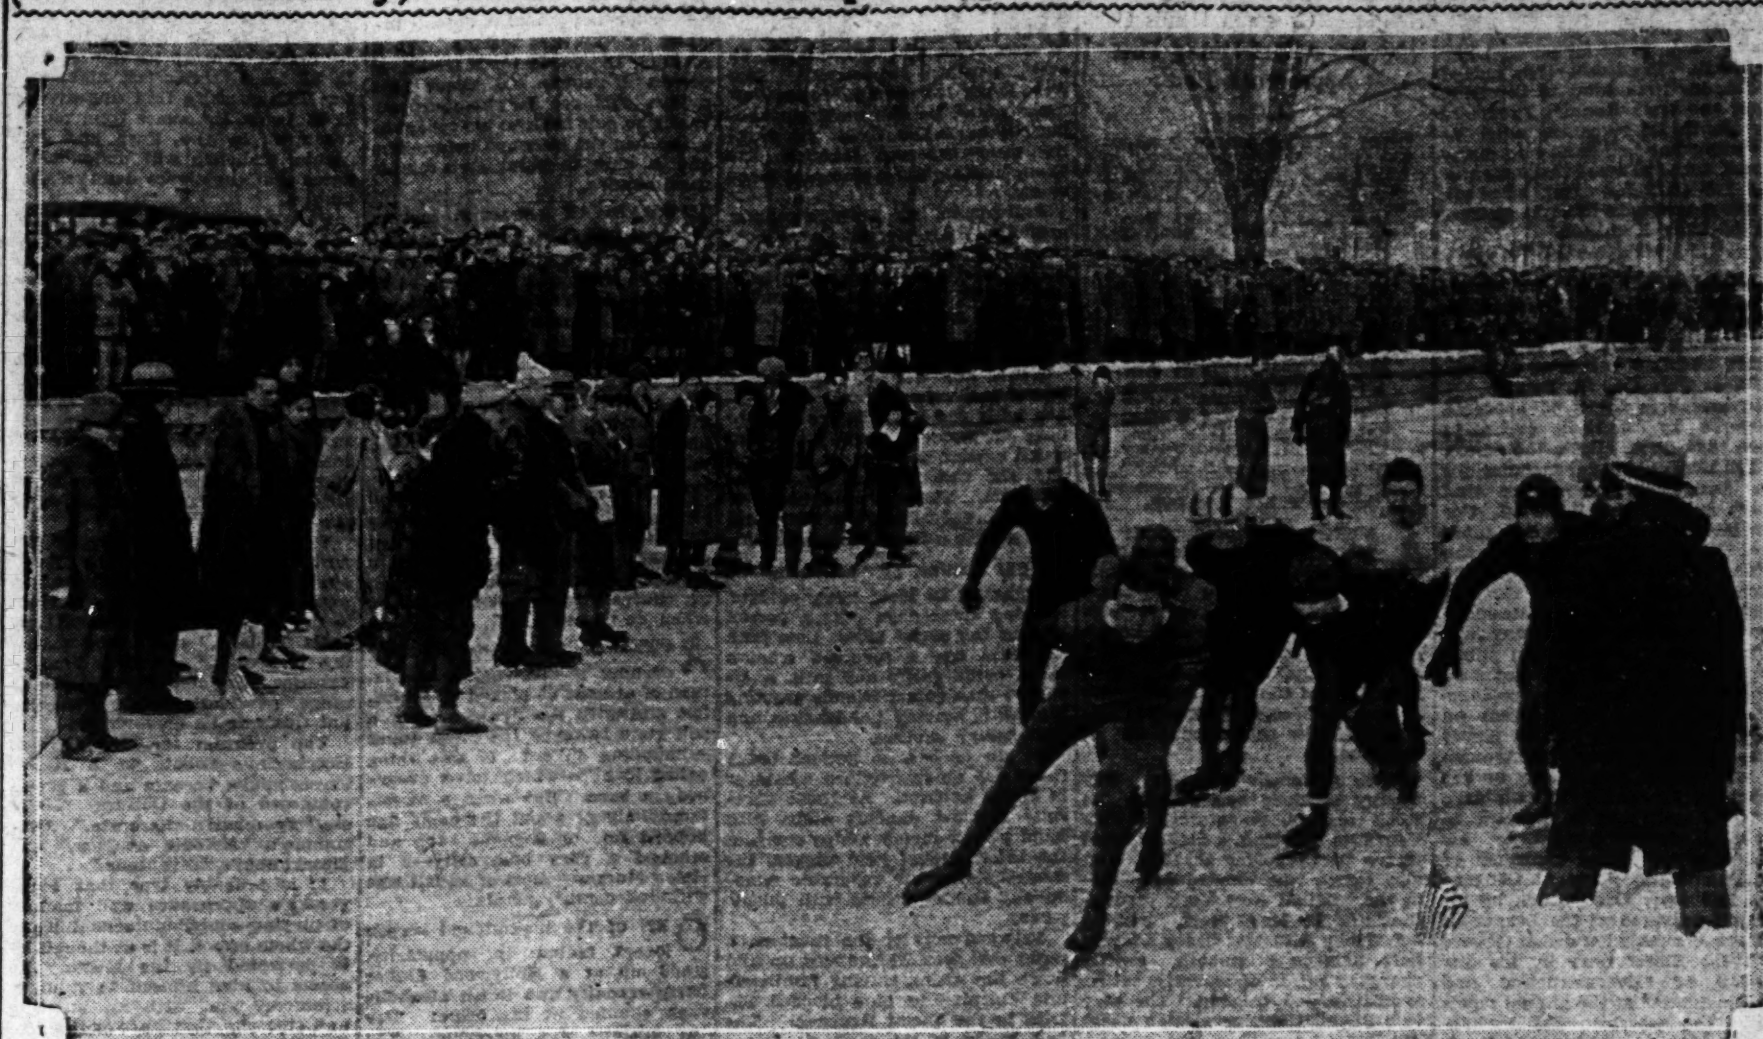

A part of the crowd extended across Grand Basin some distance to the south of the track which apparently caused the ice to sag and quite a bit of water gathered at one point, causing some fear that the ice might give away. But it didn't.

There were pools of water at some points on the racing course and one or two of the contestants fell into it. Nice day for an ice water bath.

In the two-mile men's open event, Brands quit after racing well for 15 of the necessary 17 laps. The track was 3-5 laps to the mile, shorter than usual. This had something to do with retarding the skater's speed. Not a new record was set.

They're Tough in Midwest. Montana State, with several championships and a scoring record of 60 points per game, found the going rough against the big teams of the Middle West.

St. Louis Boy, Winner of Two Championships, Setting the Pace in the Mile Open

Otto Brands, who is shown above making the pace in the mile open event, at the Southwestern championship meeting held yesterday at Grand Basin, Forest Park, was the victor in the one and two mile state championship races. In the open mile race he was pitted against Melvin Johnson of Detroit and Eddie Wedge of the same city, both holders of many titles, and Fred Wettlaufer, another Detroit skater. Brands finished third in this event.

CARNERA WILL MAKE AMERICAN DEBUT, FRIDAY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20. — Primo Carnera, whose 285 pounds are distributed over a frame 50 inches high, makes his American debut this week in a 10-round bout against "Big Boy" Peterson of Minneapolis at Madison Square Garden Friday night. Carnera's inaugural appearance has taken much of the general interest that otherwise might have been devoted to the weekly shows at Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and Cleveland.

Two champions, Jackie Fields, king of the welterweights, and Bat Battalino, featherweight titleholder, swing into action during the week in various bouts.

Bouts on the national schedule include: Tonight—At Philadelphia arena, Bat Battalino, Hartford, vs. Lew Massey, Philadelphia, featherweight; Al Rio, Spain, vs. Young Terry, Trenton, N. J., middleweight; and Chick Pilkington, New York, vs. Ernie Caesar, lightweight, each 10 rounds; at New York, St. Nicholas arena, Tommy Crogan, Omaha, vs. Joe McMahon, New York, lightweight, 10 rounds; at Cleveland, Johnny Risko, Cleveland, vs. Ricardo Bertazzolo, Italy, heavyweight, Tommy Freeman, Erie, Pa., vs. Paul Pirone, Cleveland, local heavyweight, 10 rounds; at New York, Madison Square Garden, Jack Gagon, Boston, vs. Frankie Simms, Cleveland, heavyweight, each 10 rounds; and Freddy Fitzgerald, Youngstown, O., vs. Jimmy Evans, California, welterweight, 10 rounds.

Tuesday—At New York, Broadway arena, Arthur Dekuh, Italy, vs. Big Bill Hartwell, Kansas City, heavyweight, 10 rounds; at Los Angeles, Bert Collins, Los Angeles, vs. Joe Ferguson, Los Angeles, middleweight, 10 rounds; at Denver, Young Firpo, Louisville, vs. George Manley, light-heavyweight, 10 rounds.

Wednesday—At Cincinnati, Jimmie Mahoney, Chicago, vs. Joe Anderson, Covington, Ky., light-heavyweight, 10 rounds. Friday—At New York, Madison Square Garden, Larry Johnson, Chicago, Negro, vs. Fred Lenhart, Spokane, Wash., lightweight, 10 rounds; Add Warren, North Carolina, vs. Ora Buck Weaver, Kansas, heavyweight, each 10 rounds; at Boston, Jimmy Malone, Boston, vs. Armand Emanuel, San Francisco, heavyweight, 10 rounds; at Chicago Stadium, Jackie Fields, Los Angeles, vs. Vince Dundee, Baltimore, welterweight, 10 rounds; at Toledo, Bert Collins, Toledo, vs. K. Morgan, Toledo, heavyweight, 10 rounds; at San Francisco, Dave Shady, New York, vs. Joe Roche, San Francisco, middleweight, 10 rounds; at Hollywood, Homer Sheridan, Omaha, vs. Joe Bile, Los Angeles, middleweight, 10 rounds.

McCarthy is reported to be a fast, clever man who specializes with body slams, arm stretches and the head-scissors hold. He has been credited with many impressive victories in America, numbering Ray Carpenter, the Lancaster "Iron Man," Dr. Carl Sarpolito of Cincinnati, Bull Pedigo of Louisville and Jack Ross of Chicago among the grapplers he has met and defeated.

Dr. Wilson began his mat career in amateur competition before he entered the university but achieved his greatest distinction in "Big Ten" Conference circles after a course of training under Jack Raynolds, welterweight champion of the world, who coached the Indiana squad. Since his graduation the wrestling medic, who is employed also as an internist at the Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis, has been a consistent winner in professional wrestling engagements.

The semi-finals of Friday night's card will likely see George McDowell, youthful St. Louis University law student, pitted against either Johnny Kilons of Chicago or Clarence Ecklund of Omaha in a one-fall trial match.

Former Athlete Dies. Daniel Bauman, captain of last year's basketball and baseball teams at Central High School, died Friday from a marionette growth.

Bauman, who graduated with high scholastic honors, planned to enter St. Louis University next fall.

WRA Y'S COLUMN

Like Father, Unlike Son.

YOUNG BILLY PAPKE is emulating his father, the former middleweight champion, by branching out as a fighter. Young Papke is being trained by his Pa, but will not be permitted to go professional until he has graduated from high school.

Then, boys, watch this junior "Thunderbolt." History, we regret to state, makes it rather unlikely that Junior will ever go as far as Billy, senior. Famous sons of famous fathers in the fight world are about as rare as blossoms on a century plant. In fact, the ring knows no champion with a son who became even a fair fighter. Most prize-fighting fathers suffered too much themselves to wish such a painful career on their children.

Papke's Championships.

PAPKE was a champion twice, but Lady Luck draped him with her misfortune. The first was a combination of luck and an unfair trick. Stanley Ketchell was the middleweight champion at the time, Sept. 7, 1928, and the pair were fighting at Los Angeles. Papke was coming up and was looked upon as a formidable contender, even for the dashing and slashing Ketchell.

As the bell starting the first round sounded the men walked to the center of the ring. It was the custom then to shake hands before the first round and after the last round. Ketchell and Papke shook hands and after the last round, Ketchell and Papke shook hands and after the last round, Ketchell and Papke shook hands.

Papke also thrust out his arm—but not in the same direction. His glove landed on Ketchell's chin and down sank the champion to the floor for the count. It looked like the slant of night were falling on the "Assassin," but he weathered the storm. Groggily he fought on for 12 rounds to shake off the effects of that first blow; but in the end, Papke got him and won the title by a knockout in the twelfth.

A few months later they met again and there was no handshaking before or after, this time. Ketchell literally beat Papke to pulp and knocked him out after 11 rounds of cruel punishment.

Papke was not the same fighter after that battle, although later he again was recognized as the champion. Ketchell was shot and killed at Conway, Mo., and Papke claimed the crowd and was recognized. But year later in Essex, New South Wales, Cyclone Johnny Thompson beat him for the crown—and that was the end of Papke's title claims.

He did have enough left to whip George Carpenter, a year later, forcing George's manager to toss in the towel after 17 rounds.

Revolt in Cue World.

THE big money boys of the billiard world are, seemingly, out on a strike against the billiard "octopus," a nickname given to the manufacturing company which controls the billiard phase of billiards by paying salaries to champions and star players.

Only a few days ago Willie Hoppe withdrew from the three-cushion championship tournament because he could not reach an agreement with the billiard concern regarding his salary.

Now young Jake Schaefer is said to be in revolt. In addition to these two alleged insubordinates, it is known that Edouard Horemans of Belgium and the great French player, Roger Conti, are also holding out for better money terms before consenting to play in the next 18.2 balling tournament.

With Hoppe, 18.2 champion, and Schaefer, 18.2 titleholder out of the running, and with Horemans and Conti remaining at home, the only available top rank timber for the balling event would be Walter Cochran, Eric Hagelacher of Germany and Kinney Matsuyama. It would have to be abandoned.

Give Caesar His Due.

The billiard concern deserves considerable credit for its promotion of national and international championships. Without its supervision the players would not benefit one-half as much as they have done in the past, and there would be fewer championship events held.

Hoppe, however, for years has been and still is a wonderful drawing card, and he has commanded a good salary from the company hitherto. He has been with it for the sport was kept alive through his activities as champion.

Same Actors, Different Stage.

RECENTLY at Baltimore Jimmy London and Old Man Zbyzsko, who should be in his athletic dotage, put on their stentch mat show under the auspices of John Contos. Of course, London won.

Some 10 years ago the same pair, operating for the same promoter, if memory serves us rightly, did business before a St. Louis crowd at the Coliseum, with something like the same great introduction as the following, which appeared in a Baltimore paper: "Zbyzsko's appearance against London looks as the final chapter of a series to lead to a great fight."

This London-Zbyzsko act is good. It is as good as McIntyre and Heath's "Ham Tree" act, almost as old, and just about as valuable in determining the man who will meet the champion in a title match.

Perhaps the best laugh is found in the concluding line of the Baltimore press notice which reads:

"Tuesday's London-Zbyzsko struggle is being hailed as an engagement equal to the London-Gardner bout of last week."

And if we recall correctly, it was London and Gardner who wrestled in St. Louis, years ago, in other and earlier "eliminations."

Apparently good wins and good wrestlers have no age handicaps. Yes, we admit Jimmy is good.

And in Boxing, Too.

THE boxers hang on beyond their athletic prime, too, we'll have to admit that. We have today the aged Jack Britton, Johnny Dundee, Bat Levinson and now Charley White coming back out of the pugilistic mortuary.

We can go even these one better by harking back to John L.

WILL DECIDE WHETHER

TO HOLD 18.2 CUE MEET

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—The tournament committee of the National Billiard Association will meet Wednesday to determine if a world championship 18.2 balling tournament will be held this year. A title tournament was set for late this month in Chicago, but misprints in schedules have upset plans for the meeting.

Sullivan, who was 47 years old when he fought his last fight, that was 13 years after Corbett whipped him at New Orleans. On March 12, 1906, at Grand Rapids, Mich., while training the country, Sullivan fought Jack McCormick, who had kayaked Kid McCoy in a round. John L. knocked out his foe in the second round. McCormick could not be revived for five minutes, so hard did the old man land on his chin.

Zibby isn't more than 10 years older than John L. was when he pulled that stunt.

BEARS CONTINUE TO LEAD VALLEY BASKET LEAGUE

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 20. —The Missouri Valley Conference basketball race appeared today to be near a repetition of the 1929 struggle. Washington University, which conquered the circuit honors both for team and individual play, was well on its way to capture the trophy again.

As a year ago, its chief foe appeared to be Creighton University, which Washington defeated in the first of two meetings between the teams this year. The Blue Jays have beaten Oklahoma A. and M. twice and Drake once in its other games and on Wednesday will attempt to conquer Grinnell, which has met only Washington.

This week will be comparatively dull, only one conference and three non-conference games being booked. Grinnell and Creighton meet at Omaha Wednesday, while Drake meets the University of Iowa at Des Moines Friday, and Oklahoma A. and M. enters the St. Louis at Stillwater and Creighton is host to Iowa State College at Omaha in Saturday night contests.

Maurice Van Ackerman, Creighton sophomore forward, continues to lead the race for individual scoring honors with 52 points in nine games. He tallied 51 of the marks in four conference struggles.

"Moose" Meyer, the Washington leader, who ran away with the individual scoring race last year, is in a more strategic position, however, with 60 points scored in six games, 13 of them in two conference games. His teammate, Sauselle, forward, is third.

The team standings: Washington... 3 0 1000 82 53. Creighton... 3 1 750 188 112. Drake... 2 1 500 51 66. Grinnell... 1 1 500 22 48. Oklahoma Ags... 0 3 300 63 103.

The leaders in the race for individual scoring honors, including both conference and non-conference games, are:

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 20.—Two weeks of Big Six basketball competition which produced sensational developments having been completed Saturday, the conference now faces a lull in the period of equal length. Neither Missouri nor Kansas, co-leaders, will leave the practice courts until Saturday, Feb. 1, when the Missourians will invade Oklahoma.

The following Wednesday, Kansas will resume conference play, meeting the already twice-defeated Kansas Aggies at Manhattan. Exams at Missouri.

The quiet period for the Tigers and Jayhawks is principally because of a week of final examinations at both universities.

The Big Six race, as it stands now, has all the possibilities of a stud poker game, with the Missouri and Kansas holding the advantage at present, and the game of the season (March 5, at Lawrence), representing the last card to be turned, with the Big Six championship as the prize for the victor.

Judging from contests so far this season, it is not too remote a possibility that both Jayhawk and Tiger, except when they clash in the final showdown, will play evenly. Friday, Feb. 21, will make a sweep of their remaining league encounters. The final game at Lawrence, therefore, may produce a tie or throw one of the two into the Big Six.

Missouri's Rise Sensational. The outstanding development in the Big Six loop so far has been the sensational rise of Coach George Edwards' Missouri Tigers from the doldrums of 1928 to the first two days will qualify to continue play through the last holes Wednesday and Thursday in the 72-hole four-day competition.

Donald Smith of Long Island, N. Y., made the first round in 72, one over perfect figures, tying into the lead. Two strokes ahead of the rest of the early finishers. The veteran put was out 24, one over par, and came back even 24.

Porton Smith, Joplin, Mo., whose faithful strokes have stuck together in the hearts of the contingent of veteran professionals, has been frequently mentioned as a possible winner, due to his consistency in record during the winter campaign. He is not without stern competition, however. Another young pro, Denny Shute, of Columbia, O., with his remarkable victory in the Los Angeles $10,000, has been named as a possible repeater.

$10,000 for the Winner. Among the veterans are Leo Diehl, local pro, and two times winner of the P. G. A. title; "Webb" Bob Crickshaw, former winner of the Los Angeles classic; Gene Sarazen, also a former open champion; and Walter Hagen, British open champion.

Only those who shoot cards of 70 or better will survive the first round of 18-hole, while the 75 and ties will continue in the second round. The final two days, twenty rounds, ranging from $10,000 for first place, $5000 for second, down to the $200 mark, will be awarded Thursday.

Par for the course: 435. 435 435 35. 435 435 435 35-71.

ONLY EIGHT INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE GRADUATES TO MAJORS HIT 30

HEINE MUELLER PLAYING IN ONLY 77 GAMES HAD MARK OF .378

By Herman Weick

Official batting averages of the International League, released today, show that only eight of the 27 athletes who graduate from the circuit to the major leagues, hit for average of .300 or better during the 1929 campaign. The leader of the graduates was Taylor, an outfielder, who is on the Cubs' roster. Taylor hit .371 in 125 games for the Reading Club.

Players snared by the two St. Louis clubs to add power for the 1930 campaign did not set any world on fire. Morrow, the catcher, taken from Rochester by the Cardinals last week, hit .291 in 76 battles with the Red Wings. Ray Blades, who will serve as a coach, had a mark of .146 in 21 games, while Herman Bell, who is on the roster to come back for more punishment had .048. Fowler, the hurler from Reading, hit .095, while Holshouser, the hill artist, obtained by the Browns from Baltimore, finished with a swat mark of .250.

Boal hit .345. Albert Boal, the catcher, who was once with the Cardinals, found the International pitchers for a mark of .345. He hopes to carry that figure to aid the Pirates next season. Sweeney, who will strive to replace Phil Todd, St. Louis boy, as first sacker for the Red Sox, finished with .335, while Johnny Neun, the player Bill McKeehan expects to send George Sisler to the bench with the Braves, had a .330 figure.

Others who will graduate, who hit better than .300 were as follows: Fisher .316, West .312, Stone .312 and Lepp .312. They go to the Giants, Robins, Tigers and Senators, respectively.

Although Taylor, playing in 125 games was the real batting champion of the circuit, he was paced by none other than our own Heine Mueller, who playing 77 games for Buffalo, hit to an average of .378. Heine went to the plate 378 times and cracked out 109 safeties, which included 29 doubles, seven triples and 10 home runs. Heine drove in 59 runs.

walked 49 times and struck out on but 23 occasions. Another who was way up there was Joe Bush, former Brown, who swatted 409 in 21 games for Newark. Taylor Speaker, Newark manager, managed a .355 figure in 48 contests.

Watkins Led Rochester. With the Cardinals' farm, outfielder George Watkins was the pacesetter with an average of .337, followed by Worthington, another meadowman, .327. Collins, the slugging first sacker of the Red Wings finished with .317. He was the home run champion of the circuit with 33 and drove in the greatest number of tallies—134, as well as tying with Fisher, who goes to the Giants, for the greatest number of total bases—352. In addition to his 33 homers, Collins had a like number of doubles and a dozen triples.

George Toporcer, who was voted the most valuable player to his club in the league, hit only .252 in 149 games. He scored 141 runs and coaxed 123 bases on balls from the opposing hurlers, the greatest number obtained by any player. Billy Southworth, who returned to the Red Wings as manager, played in 37 games and hit .249. Buffalo paced the league in team batting with .299, while Rochester, which won its second straight pennant, finished seventh with .253. Jersey City, which was last, hit only .233 for the year.

One of the outstanding individual feats of the season was made by George Quellig of Reading, who established a new mark by getting 15 straight hits in as many times at bat. The major league figure is 11, held by Tris Speaker. Quellig made three straight hits against Toronto, Aug. 9; Aug. 10, he made six out of six; Aug. 11, four out of four, and Aug. 12, two straight before he was stopped. In the streak he had five homers, one double and nine singles.

HIGH SCHOOLS FINISH FIRST HALE OF LEAGUE BASKET SERIES

By Harold Tuhill

The first round in the City High School League basketball race will be concluded Saturday evening with a double-header at Roosevelt. Soldan will defend its hold on first place from the challenging Beaumont five in the feature game. The first contest will be between Central and Roosevelt, starting at 8 o'clock.

Soldan reached its position at the top of the heap by reason of its victory over Cleveland last week. Cleveland, which finished its first round, having met all four schools and defeating three, rests in second place, followed by Beaumont, with two wins and one loss.

Beaumont came dangerously close to losing the Roosevelt game last Saturday, inasmuch as the Rough Riders led 15 to 7 at the end of the first half. The North Siders spurted in the second half and managed to win, 23 to 20. Roosevelt will have an opportunity to score its first conference victory when it opposes Central, since the Midcityans have failed to win all season. Central lost a practice game to Principia Junior College, 19 to 16, a team which Roosevelt defeated, 37 to 15.

Guhman May Start. It is probable that the showing of John Guhman, who scored 11 points for Beaumont, will earn him a place as a starting forward against Soldan. The other forward will be Bob Kalbitz, with Ray Toberman at center and Otto Schwandt and Campbell Elliott, guards.

There will be no change in the Soldan five of Barney Passer and Keith Walker, forwards; Dave Cook, center; Bob Lahey and Ben Reese, guards. Bill "Red" Jones may get a chance to start in Lahey's place at guard.

FALCARGO WINS IN ROUND ROBIN TENPIN TOURNAMENT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Joe Falcargo of New York, world's game champion, clinched place in an all-star round robin bowling tournament here last night when he conquered Jimmy Smith of Chicago, 2110 to 1914. Falcargo had 51 strikes,

MRS. EDISON TELLS INTIMATE FACTS ABOUT HER HUSBAND

He Regrets Talkies, Writes No Letters, Has Arrivals in Which None May Sit.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Thomas A. Edison wears silk night shirts, Mrs. Edison says in an interview in the American Magazine. He likes to feel silk next to his skin. Annually Mrs. Edison makes him a box of handkerchiefs from the softest India silk. They are a yard square.

"I am always finding out of the boy in him," says Mrs. Edison. "He simply could not do the house without giving me affectionate hug and kiss. It is the custom of years for me to go to the door with him for a few parting words."

He regrets the talkies and would like to see Mary Pickford or Clara Bow in an old silent film. He doesn't like bridge, dancing or golf. He considers golf was invented for men who eat too much.

He writes practically no letters. Harvey Firestone writes to him but he does not write to Firestone.

He never remembers holidays or anniversaries, not even Christmas, his own birthday or his wedding anniversary. He shaves himself with an old-fashioned, straight-blade razor.

At home the inventor decrees that his arm-chair shall be kept sacred. Nobody else has ever sat in it. He allows no one to disturb his copy of the morning paper.

His favorite author is Victor Hugo. His favorite books are "Les Miserables" and "Tollers of the Sea." "Evangeline" and "Enoch Arden" are his favorite poems.

CHICAGO OPERA SINGER WEDS
Thelma Votipka Becomes Bride of W. J. Hamilton.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—The wedding March from Lohengrin, sung by the Chicago Civic Opera Company at its matinee yesterday, was virtually a wedding march in reality for Miss Thelma Votipka, soprano now in her first season with the company, and W. T. Hamilton, electrical engineer.

The two were married immediately after the concert. The bridegroom divides his time between here and New York.

47 Years' Practice Taught Dr. Caldwell

Many things about Men and Women

DR. CALDWELL loved people. He studied the habits of his patients and tried to improve their ways of living. His observations over a long period of time convinced him many people were ruining their health by a careless choice of laxatives. Then he determined to write a prescription which would get at the cause of constipation and correct it quickly and safely.

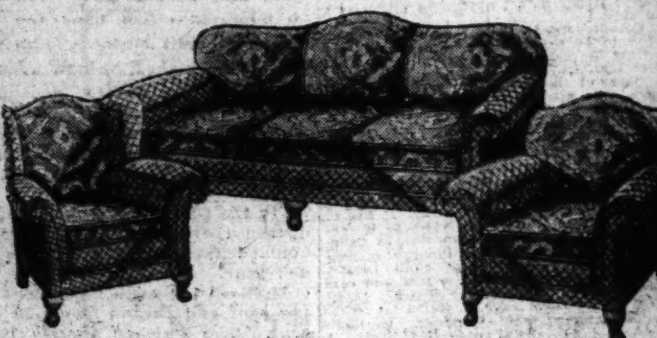

How successful his efforts were is best shown by the fact that the prescription he wrote back in 1885 has become one of the world's most popular laxatives! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. In thousands of cases where unpleasant breath, coated tongue, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite, or energy showed him that there was an irregularity of elimination in men, women or children. It proved successful in the most obstinate cases. So men liked it. Children liked its pleasant taste. And everybody is pleased with the gentle way it accomplishes its purpose.

By 1888, the demand for this laxative was so great that the doctor permitted it to be bottled and sold by drug stores. Today you can obtain Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from any drug store in the world.

PENROD JASHBER

By Booth Tarkington

CHAPTER 1.

PENROD did not realize that he had said anything remarkable to the carpenter; and perhaps indeed, he hadn't. People older than he live in a world commingled of imaginings and the appearances we call realities, and live there little disturbed by constant inconsistencies. It is, in fact, a human process far from uncommon for us in fancy to insult, humiliate, or even destroy, injurious superstitious, and then, perhaps almost immediately, to greet them in the flesh with courtesy, or even with a deference perfectly genuine. It might be clearer possibly to say that many of us, like Penrod, live not so much in one commingled world as in two interchangeable worlds, the one able instantly to replace the other with such smooth rapidity as to produce not the slightest jar. In youth especially, the interchanging of these two worlds is so continuous, so facile, and accomplished with so quick and sleek a movement that it is like the play of light and shadow when young grasses flutter and twinkle, reflected in a clear stream, itself untroubled by the April breeze, Penrod's interchangeability in respect to carpenters was the prelude to his more striking interchangeability in respect to George B. Jashber, that most stirring of all the dramatic personae he created for himself and out of himself. The great Jashber period, unlike the carpenter, however, did not come upon him spontaneously, full born out of a single emotion; George B. Jashber came on by fits and starts, as it were, developing slowly and irregularly, dropping together for days at a time and then, returning to life, becoming at last so well conceived and complete a figure as to be powerful in the affairs of people whose decades older and more experienced than his creator.

The tall, half-filled sawdust box in the studio in the woodshed adjoining the new horseless stable was Penrod's studio, his hermitage and his castle. Thither he retired when life proved injurious and his world rigorous or scornful; in this soft-floored fastness he secluded himself with dramatic imaginings of triumphant impossibilities that should send his parents or his sister or his aunts or his teachers or Della, the cook, or others of the ruling class, with convulsions of remorse, and make lovely, amber-haired Marjorie Jones admire him more than ever. Here, too, he kept a few private articles that might have raised the rate of Mr. Schofield's insurance several thousand per cent had their nature been known to the agent who "wrote" the policy. And yet these articles were so plain and unpretentious that Penrod had salvaged two of them from a scrapheap. These two were a damaged kerosene can and an old chimneyless lantern. However, after he had pitched the leak in each with sealing wax, both were practically serviceable, and the result of what little dripping they did was absorbed by the sawdust, so that no place in the box was ever really uncomfortably damp to sit on. As for the rest of Penrod's hidden store, it consisted of a varying supply of corn-cob cigarettes, a few matches, a broken knife, some penny stubs, an old cigar box, an empty soap box and the secret manuscript of Harold Ramorez. This last was an unfinished romance of road agency, kept buried beneath the surface of the sawdust and often forgotten for months at a time. Then it would be exhumed, perhaps on a day when Penrod was gloomy through some oppression, and several chapters—or, it might be, only part of a chapter, or no more than the beginning of a sentence—would be added.

THE earlier portions of the narrative were concerned with the escapes of the handsome bandit, Harold Ramorez, from detectives and other vicious and inept enemies, including ghosts, and the reader (if a reader may be imagined for the manuscript) was led to place his sympathies entirely with Ramorez; for Penrod worked after the manner of all child-of-nature authors, picturing his idealized self as the hero, which unconscious system, when followed with sufficient artlessness and a little craftsmanship, leads the child-of-nature reader to picture his idealized self as the hero, so that reader and author meet and merge in the fiction, and, yet, consoled by the shared belief that the story was "good." Thus, although Penrod did not know that he had a method, he did have one; but, for the most part, nothing happened to it—no infrequent disaster in cases like this.

He had what is sometimes defined in argot as "change of heart," and it radically altered his life at a high point in the narrative. Penrod began to admire detectives more than he admired bandits; and, although the author never realized what he had done, he too pictured Ramorez as the villain, while the hitherto malevolent but futile detective, Jashber, or Jasher, burst unexpectedly into noble bloom as the hero—this in the course of one chapter, short enough in the reading. However, in the writing of it Penrod consumed the greatest part of two mornings that were a full month apart, and, in the meantime, he had been to two matinees, had read several paper novels, and, moreover, had strained his young eyes at more than several unusually violent "movies." To be definite, this chapter was:

HAROLD RAMOREZ decided he would go away from where he was all such bloodshed and plots of the scoundrel Jashber so biding goodby to some of his friends he got on the cars, he looked all around and coolly lit a cigarette. Well, said the conductor this is not the place where anybody is allowed to smoke and you have no ticket I guess I know that as well as anybody said our hero but you need not talk so much I got money and will pay $5 bill for a ticket. The conductor took hold of the $5 and put it in his pocket. Then the conductor went on out. Soon Harold Ramorez had reached the city and he was just walking around looking at the stores and houses and not hunting anything when a shot rang out startling our hero. What could that be said Harold I wonder why anybody would shoot at me here where I do not know anybody being sling went the old pistol bling bling here for our hero, one hole went through our hero coat and one went in his hat slightly cringing his scalp and produce a flesh wound Harold smiled at this Q said he a flesh wound is nothing and will soon heal up but I would like to know what anybody is shootin at me here for where I never came before in my life and my enemies did not did not know I was going to any such place. O no they didn't O no at all I guess said a tantalizing voice O no it said.

Harold wished to know who it was talking him so he looked around. Soon he saw that the Jashber still holding the smoking revolver in his hand. He was behind a tree except part of his face and the old pistol. Well I would like to know what you have to come all the way here for our hero said to him I was not doing anything to you and you have no business to go shooting at me said he I guess I got some rights around here.

There followed a deep curse. Well go ahead and swear all you want to because that will not hurt me but remember when you go to meet your maker each vile oath you say will be in your account and how many do something you will not like.

Well I did not stand this kind of talk said Jashber. There flowed a curse and some more vile oaths I hate you Harold Ramorez and I got you, et said he.

Our hero coolly tanted him for what he said then you are the worst yet said Harold. I will shoot you through and through said the scoundrel you are a

(The dr- is are Penrod's.) Our hero smiled coolly at this. No I am not any such thing said he but you are a double

Well I will not stand this said the scoundrel. He took a white out of his pocket and blew on it. There was another detective hiding behind some bushes and 4 more were also hid around there somewhere and all of a sudden they jumped out. Soon our hero was fighting for his very life. He hardly knew what he better do so he took the fat Jashbers old pistol away from him and shot it off three of the scoundrels went to meet their maker but now he did not have any more cartridges. The scoundrel blew out left besides Jashber and these two scoundrels bit him till their teeth met in the flesh.

He stabbed the other one and now his enemy Jashber the detective was the only one left I guess your sorry you began it now said Ramorez. Soon Harold walked on off and found a place to sleep and made a fire to cook some bacon because he was tired now.

The scoundrel began to cry and our hero gave him a kick and tanted him.

Jashber went on crying some more he got down on his knees and begged and begged, but after all his perambulations Harold was not going to do anything such a scoundrel so he fixed the rope the right way to hang people. Soon he tied it up in the trees. The scoundrel blew out loud as he could but took his dead. Soon Harold walked on off and found a place to sleep and made a fire to cook some bacon because he was tired now.

At this point, work upon the manuscript was interrupted. To Be Continued. (Copyright, 1930.)

Use Soil for Bulbs

EARTH is better than pebbles for every kind of bulb grown indoors. Some varieties, such as Parrot-white Narcissus, Hyacinths, the Chinese Snowdrops, and a few others may be grown in pebbles and water, with no soil at all. If this is attempted a few pieces of charcoal should be added to help keep the water clean. Better and more certain results may be obtained, however, where soil is used, and the saving in labor is really very little, says the American Home.

Flowers grown from bulbs in soil remain in bloom considerably longer because they are not dependent alone upon the plant food stored up in the bulb itself, as are those grown in water. Once you have grown them in soil you will never go back to the pebble method.

How I Spent My Days at the White House

BY MRS. CALVIN COOLIDGE

"One of my favorite walks was around the reflecting basin in front of the Lincoln Memorial."

ARTICLE 5. ALL my life I have done my best work in the early morning hours. As a schoolgirl with home work to be prepared, I can remember saying that I could do more work in half an hour before breakfast than in an hour after supper. Perhaps this is a New England trait.

After the President left the house in the morning to begin his work for the day, I busied myself with various household duties, often to the accompaniment of music from the radio or phonograph, in which my canaries joined. Some flowers were always sent up to me from the flower room in the west wing, and these I arranged for our hero, a bowl about my own room, and the west sitting room. Flowers in the other rooms were arranged by the man in whose care the grounds and gardens of the White House were.

The west sitting-room might have been called the general sitting-room, for there we gathered before luncheon and dinner were announced and there were the newspapers and magazines on a long table at one side. Family pictures hung on the walls and comfortable overstuffed chairs and sofas full of honorable years were conveniently placed about the room.

My secretary arrived at 9 o'clock and opened and sorted the mail. It was easily classified and fell under the following general heads: Personal, requests to be received, requests for donations and articles for bazaar, requests for photographs and autographs, requests for assistance of various sorts, invitations to be present at meetings or ceremonies of one kind or another and letters from persons of unsound mind which were turned over to the Secret Service.

I MUST tell the story of one letter which went into the files. I am one of 15 women belonging to the same college fraternity who have kept in circulation a round robin letter since the summer of 1915. When our biennial convention was held in Berkeley, Cal. It makes the rounds quite regularly once in three months and travels from coast to coast. Any one who has ever seen a round robin knows what it looks like for they all have the same general appearance. Each contributor writes on paper of different size and color, some letters are written by hand, some are typewritten, and all together they present a strange appearance to one unaccustomed to them. In August of 1926, this round robin was reported missing for the first time, and inquiries were sent out. Each member was asked to make diligent search for the lost letter. Not until all the others had reported did they appeal to me. Unable to locate it in my own files, I asked the Secret Service to have a look in theirs and, sure enough, there was the bird, looking very much bedraggled, duly numbered in blue and marked "Bureau of Letters" and all written by college graduates of some years' standing.

Personal letters I took charge of and I answered many of them myself. A letter in my handwriting will never have any commercial value—they are too numerous. A large portion of the other letters were answered by my secretary, sometimes after consultation with me, often not.

As a usual thing I took a brisk walk during the forenoon. One of my favorite walks was around the reflecting basin in front of the Lincoln Memorial, but this walk I enjoyed most in the late afternoon, when the sun, was setting over Arlington and a rose-lavender haze hung over the river.

SOMETIMES my walk took me to the shopping district and I visited some of the stores to make personal selection of various articles of which I stood in need. One such time, when soon after my husband became President, had as its objective the purchase of a hat. My secretary accompanied me. We entered the shop and a young saleswoman came forward to flourish at our wishes. I described such a hat as I required and she brought two or three from one of the cases. Putting them down on the table before me, she looked at me closely and said, "My, you look like Mrs. Coolidge!" I smiled pleasantly, but uninterestedly. "She brought two or three more hats and put them down. 'Did any one ever tell you before that you look like Mrs. Coolidge?' she asked. 'Yes,' I replied simply, with never a smile. 'I made my selection and prepared to depart, signaling my secretary to give her the address, and we all had a little laugh together. Delegations, groups, and some individuals were given appointments to be received at 12 noon, and if arrangements had been made for a picture, the party was assembled at the foot of one of the flights of stone steps leading down from the South portico to the flagging below. The iron railing, with its entwining Virginia creeper made an ever pleasing background, and at times a fragrant one as well.

WHEN the social season was in full swing I received at tea twice a week, usually on Mondays and Fridays. These groups were limited to 25 preferably, to 30 at the outside, and were made up of those who had made requests to be received. This seemed a strange custom to me when I first went to Washington, but when explained to me, I could see that it had been established wisely. It is obvious that when we wish to call upon the wife of the President we cannot go up and ring the front doorbell and ask if the first lady is in. We therefore leave a note written either to her personally or to her secretary, asking if we may have the honor of being received. An engraved card is then sent to us stating the day and hour at which we may call. If we are visiting in Washington and wish to call upon the mistress of the White House, it is proper to leave cards at the door, together with a note asking whether or we may be received. If we are strangers and unknown to the President's wife, we must ask our hostess or some friend to make the request for us.

I received in the red parlor, with one side making the introductions and a friend pouring out tea at a table in one corner. Sometimes I had smaller groups of 12 or 15, and then I had a low table placed opposite the open fire, and, after receiving my guests, sat down and poured their tea.

IN order to show that upsets occur in a presidential household as well as in any other, I shall relate the story of two. At intervals the wives of the members of the President's Cabinet came to have tea with me. I usually asked them to come to the library, on the second floor. This room is directly over the blue room and is of the same size and shape. Upon the occasion of which I write, we were busily talking over all our cups of tea when I noticed one of the ladies tucking her tea napkin into her bag. I made a mental note that I would tell her before she left, in order to spare her the embarrassment of finding it after she reached home.

A few minutes later, the lady with the bag was speaking, the others were giving her strict attention. She put her hand into her bag. I saw a puzzled expression come over her face and amusement got the better of me. "You may as well bring it right out, for I saw you put it in," I said. With that she drew forth the little Madeline square and held it up in astonishment. She had thought it was one of her husband's handkerchiefs which she had brought because she had a slight cold, but it was a White House napkin and it was full of holes!

THIS other incident was really a series of misfires. This occurred when we had established a temporary residence at Dupont Circle while the White House was being repaired. The occasion was a formal dinner in honor of a foreign guest. The company arrived, dinner was announced, and we proceeded to the diningroom to the strains of music dispensed by a stringed orchestra from the Marine Band stationed in the ballroom across the hall. The guests were seated with due ceremony, but one of the chairs proved unworthy and the canteen gave way beneath the weight of a distinguished guest. A substitute was brought, but the gentleman preferred to remain uncomfortable rather than embarrass his hostess by attracting attention to this plight. The tie of another gentleman slipped its moorings but was unobtrusively retrieved and secured.

An aid, one of those faultlessly attired officers bedecked with gold braid and lace who may always be seen near the President when he appears at formal functions, had been having some dental work done and a piece of temporary material had been put in place in order that he might present his usual flawless appearance at the dinner. This structure melted at the first spoonful of hot soup, and I feel sure his dinner partner thought he had been suddenly stricken with facial paralysis from the conformation made in an effort to cover the deficiency. Not until dinner was over and the guests had departed did I learn that just as the food was to be served a neighbor had telephoned that our chimney was on fire. A man was stationed on the roof to keep a careful watch on that and there was no further difficulty. For a long time that particular dinner was referred to as "the dinner of horrors."

Restless Children
Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria. Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy. It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand.

A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; it does any suggestion of unpleasant breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this sure remedy preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. A. Stay Proud of Him

HE'S too little to care now . . . the too young to realize. But later, he will thank you . . . over and over again . . . if you will help him now to develop a firm, robust body, strong bones and solid teeth.

See that he gets plenty of sunshine, fresh air and rest. And when he is hungry . . . give him wholesome, body-building food.

Give him Ralston . . . the quick-cooking cereal that supplies all the vital nourishment of whole wheat. Children love it for its rich, appetizing flavor of golden wheat ripened in the sun.

Growing children and grown-ups also like Ralston Wheat Flakes . . . temptingly crisp, crunchy whole wheat flakes. Try them both . . . soon.

THE WAY OF WOMAN

Marguerite M. Marshall

of the name of the wage-earning woman—yes, and of the same woman—are you going to Mr. Henry Ford get away with the laws he lays down about the female sex in "Ford's Review?" writes with Henry? He writes because, as Christine Cross points out in "Selling Consumer," women virtually let him to do up Model T into a man's car. He is to name the fashion of the matter as Model A? He is not for us, Ford's ideas about men, but as an expert on the subject he's an enormously successful manufacturer of automobiles.

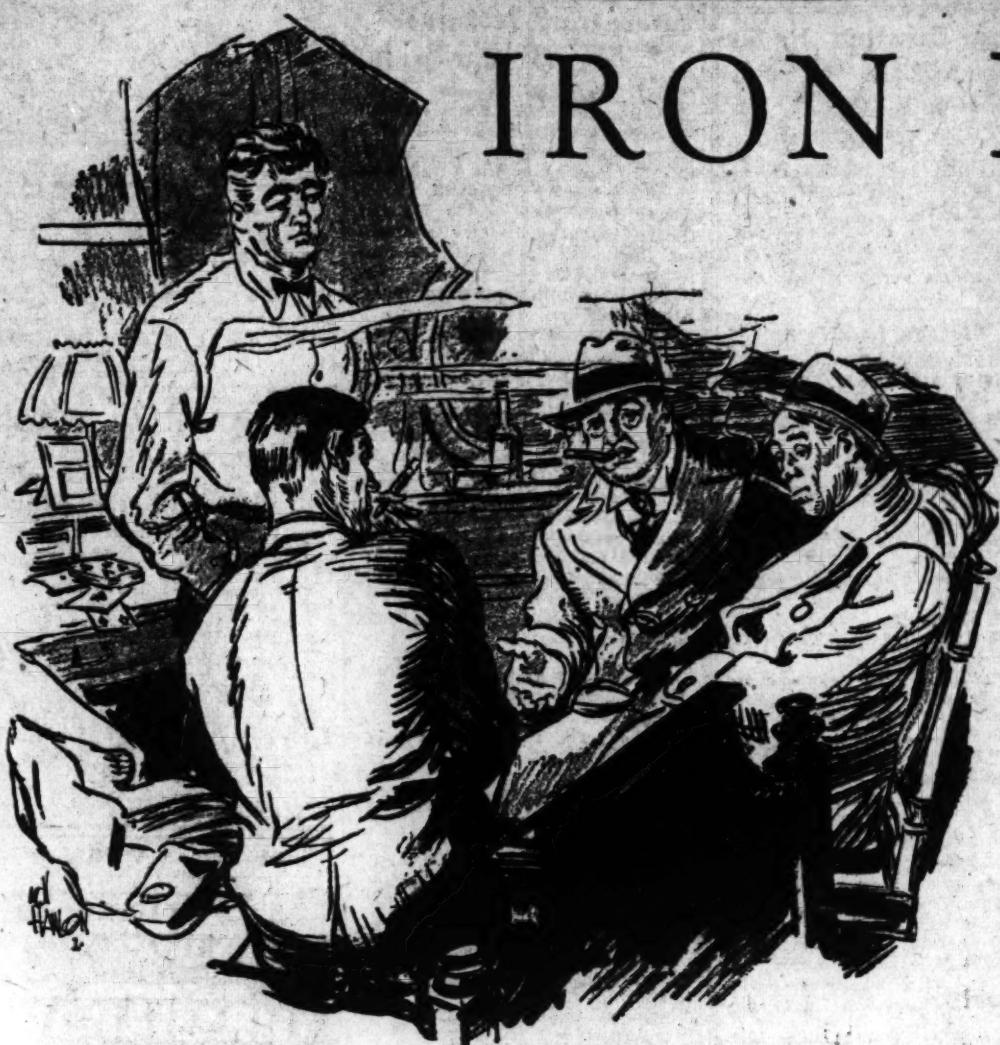

Women don't want to think on mechanical and industrial matters. They don't want to think much even their home life. Generally speaking, even at home they don't want to make decisions. I suppose it is because for women to make decisions in daily life because it is experience to make decisions, they haven't the experience. The mechanical age means the mechanical age. Women will be put up with any longer. Women must pay for the release from drudgery and they can pay in only one way—that is, by studying and working. They want better wives and mothers. They think the whole situation lies in this: that men and women must learn to work together. They want to learn to work together. They want to learn to work together. They want to learn to work together.

Then, who on earth except Henry Ford ever found the American woman averse to thinking and making decisions in her home? That the poor dear is usually named for her tendency to hog the decisions—to rule the home and run husband and children according to her will, or, at least, that's what she does. But, if we may believe Count Keyserling, Louis Bromfield and indeed, our own eyes that have looked upon too many militantly decisive wives and mothers, Henry Ford really believes that the woman in the home is a marvel of feminine tact, with a velvet glove at least an inch thick.

As for women's being released from drudgery, that "comfortable" life is now coming to pass for many women without young children. But why should such women devote all their new leisure time to being wives and mothers? How can they—when the children have gone to school and their father to his office? Must the drudgery-omnipotent woman settle down to eight hours a day of idle contemplation of Better Motherhood and Better Motherhood? Well, just watch the American woman doing it. Or, rather, watch what she is doing in business, in the professions, in the arts, in social service, in politics, with the exception of the physical care of a large, old-fashioned, inconvenient house. If she has intelligence and a sense of balance, such as outside activities make her a better because more interesting and alive woman in her home, as well as out of it.

FINALLY, what proof is there that men and women as a whole are pulling against each other? Well, that either sex is insisting on its rights at the expense of the other. Here, again, individualism is resisting individualism. But surely the ideal of some feminists, or tolerant and woman-respecting American men, of husband and wife in the successful partnership, co-operation, that isn't going to be achieved by trying to rebuild the old wall between women in the home and men in the outside world.

Something tells us that Mr. Ford had better stick to the quantity production of Model A's and leave the duties, ideals and destinies of model American women. Let's leave blarney, or rolls, may be split and toasted and will serve for breakfast or luncheon.

"Listen, Regan," he said, "What do you say we all make a clean-up?"

CHAPTER I

COKE sat up, pushed back his hat, took his feet off the bed, and, getting up, stood yawning and rubbing his fists in his eyes. Across the room Regan was playing solitaire on a writing desk, and Coke's sparring partner, Jeff Davis, was sitting in a big chair by the window turning the pages of a magazine. Coke walked over to Regan and stood looking over his shoulder.

"Boy, you sure was cutting it," said Jeff. "A buzz-saw ain't got nothing on you."

"Sure," said Coke. "I always sleep like that." He bent over and stared at Regan's layout. "Play your ace of diamonds," he said.

Regan pushed him away. "Don't bother me, I got a bet on this game."

Coke still yawning and stretching, went back to his chair and lolled, flexing his fingers out of boredom.

"Yeah," he said, finally, "you guys are a hell of a lot of company."

"Ain't that a laugh!" he said. "That guy's been sleeping for the last half hour and he says we're a lot of company."

"Yeah," said Jeff. "Well, I'm awake now, ain't I?"

"It's a wonder you guys couldn't think up something so I wouldn't get stale sitting around like this."

"Want me to dance for you?" asked Regan.

Jeff burst out laughing. "Let me do it," he said.

"Think I'll smoke a cigar," said Coke.

"Better lay off them cigars," said Jeff. "You'll cut your wind."

"Look at Jeff," said Regan. "That black boy'll cut his wind for him."

"The hell he will," said Coke, but he made no move to take a cigar.

Regan got up, lit a cigarette, and handed it to Coke.

"Now," he said, "don't say I'm always trying to cramp your style. Pull on this and get throat trouble."

Coke took the cigarette and sat smoking, perfectly relaxed, his eyes closed.

"That's just what I needed," he said.

REGAN went back to his game of solitaire, and Jeff cocked up his feet and began to read an article in the magazine. As a rule he merely looked at the pictures. Coke opened his eyes.

"Hey, George," he called to Regan. "Look at Jeff. That boy's gonna ruin his eyesight."

Regan turned and stared at Jeff. "I didn't know they printed them kind of stories in magazines," he said.

"It's about the champ," said Jeff. "A lot of bunk. All about his knockout record. Who the hell'd he ever knock out except Turf Munn? And he was doped."

"Well, he flattened your nose," said Regan.

"Yeah, I slipped and ran into a left."

"Oh, God," said Regan, and went back to his game.

Coke sat puffing on his cigarette, then he got up and tossed it into an ashtray.

"I'd like to get a go at him," said Coke.

"Well," said Jeff, "all you got to do is knock Prince Pearl kicking."

"Yeah," said Regan, "that's all he's got to do."

"You think I won't, don't you?" said Coke, leaning over Regan's shoulder.

Regan put down his cards, opened the drawer of the writing desk, and took out a pile of newspaper clippings. Coke knocked them out of his hand.

"Good Lord, George," he said. "Ain't you been in the game long enough to know that these newspaper guys don't know straight up? The hell with them clippings."

"Well," said Regan, "all the smart money's on the black boy. That's something."

"All the smart money was on Willard once, too, wasn't it?" said

Coke, flushing. "You guys give me a pain in the neck."

He went into the bathroom, banging the door.

"Boss," said Jeff, "why don't you lay off of him? You know he's on edge."

Regan turned and stared at Jeff. "You let me handle him, Jeff," he said. "I know that bird better than anybody in the world. Listen, he's got a chance to win. A small chance, I'm saying; but a chance just the same. It ain't no walk-away like all these guys think. But I don't want him to pass up the only chance he's got by getting over-confident."

"Ain't much chance of that, with you at him all the time," said Regan. "but you don't know that guy. Why, when he put on his first pair of gloves he thought he'd be champion in a week."

"Well," said Jeff, "that's the old spirit."

"Yeah," said Regan, "that's the old spirit that leads to busted noses and pretty ears."

"I'll say he's got a kick in that left of his and his right don't tap you," said Jeff.

"Sure," said Regan, "but he's got to land 'em. That black boy's hard to hit. He'd make a monkey out of the champ if he'd give him a match."

JEFF laughed. "Don't you never worry about Mike Shay fighting the smoke. He'd left jab him to death."

"Well," said Regan, spreading out his hands, "what do you think he'll do to Coke then?"

"I think he'll decision him," said Jeff. "but Coke won't even knock he's been hit."

"Hell," said Regan, "you dumb pugs are all alike. If a guy can take it, why, that's all you care about. You can't win a fight by taking 'em on the chin. If you could, you'd be champion."

"There you go," said Jeff. "Coke came back into the room, scowling.

"Well," he said, "have you fight experts got me knocked out yet?"

Regan went back to his game. "I'm backing you," said Jeff. "I'm gonna bet a little money on you."

Coke patted him on the shoulder. "Bet a lot, Jeff," he said.

"Yeah," said Regan, "and I'm setting my checks in on the black boy. He'll have his left in your face so much you'll think it belongs there."

Coke stood staring at Jeff and slowly nodding his head.

"Jeff," he said, "I been that guy's meat ticket for God knows how long. Ever since I left the factory. And that's the way he hands it to me. You bet on that coon, you cheap skate, and I'll give you the lacking of your life."

"He ain't gonna bet on the smoke," said Jeff. "He's just talking."

"Ain't I?" said Regan.

"Go ahead," said Coke. "That'll be all the more reason for me to back him. Go ahead."

Regan went on with his game for a moment, then he turned to Coke.

"It's about your bedtime, ain't it?"

Coke glanced at the clock. "Yeah; but I don't feel much like sleeping."

"Want to play some auction pinocchio?" asked Jeff.

"No," said Coke. "I'm off of cards."

"You're about off of everything, ain't you?" demanded Regan.

"Yeah," said Coke, "including you."

Jeff got up and stretched, tucked his magazine under his arm, and started for the door.

"Well," he said, "I think I'll go over to the Majestic and grab me a girl. Want to go along, George?"

"No," said Regan. "I dance like Coke boxes."

"Aw, lay off of me," said Coke, flaring up.

"So long," said Jeff, going out. "Coke and Regan sat in silence for a long time; Regan playing solitaire, Coke sulking. Finally Coke gan put away his cards and turned his chair around.

"How you feeling, Coke?"

"I'm O. K."

"You gonna fight that guy like I told you?"

"I'm gonna fight him to suit myself."

"I guess you don't want to be champion."

"Listen," said Coke, "if you was such a hell of an expert you'd be out there yourself getting the jack instead of me."

REGAN got up. "All right, swellhead," he said. He went over to the closet and got his overcoat and hat. Coke, sulking, watched him out of the corner of his eye. Regan put on his overcoat and started for the door.

"Listen, George," said Coke, "stick around a while, can't you? I don't feel like sleeping."

"No," said Regan. "I got to be going."

"Come on, George," said Coke, "stick around. Lord, don't you know I get to feeling low when I'm training?"

"Now start your yelping," said Regan. "To hear you talk you'd think you really did some training. Suppose you had trouble making weight like some guys. Two days on the road and your weight's O. K. Lucky and don't know it."

"All right," said Coke. "I don't train hard, but it makes me feel low just the same. Sit down, George, and let's have a talk like we used to."

Regan sat down without taking off his overcoat. Coke sat staring at the floor.

"Well," said Regan, "you don't seem to be doing much talking."

"George," said Coke, "ever hear anything more about my wife?"

Regan laughed curly and got up.

"So that's the song!"

"Yeah. You know I get pretty lonesome for that kid."

"You're a hell of a man," said Regan.

"You don't know that kid."

"I know her better than you do," said Regan. "Listen, Coke, if I was you I wouldn't be wasting no time thinking about a dame that ran out on me because I couldn't buy her an automobile."

"Hell," said Coke, "she was used to thing, see? You couldn't expect her to settle down and do housework."

"Yeah," said Regan, laughing. "The whole used to burn hotels and day coaches and three-a-day on a tanktown circuit. Where is she? Anybody ever hear of her? To hear her tell it you'd think Ziegfeld was begging her to take over the Folies."

"You never did like her, George," said Coke.

"No, I never did," said Regan. "And the biggest break you ever got was when she went away and left you."

"That's what you say," said Coke. "But you don't know how I feel about that kid."

Regan put on his hat. "I'm leaving you, Coke," he said. "I'm sick of this song. Listen, take my advice: lay off that cowtown sobriety; she'll make a bum of you."

Coke ran his hands over his face and sighed.

"I'd just like to see her and talk to her."

"Don't worry," said Regan. "As soon as she needs money you'll hear from her."

REGAN started out the door, but the telephone rang and he turned back. Coke made a move to answer it, but Regan waved him away and took down the receiver.

"Hello," said Regan. "Yeah, this is him speaking. Well, I don't see no reason why not. Sure, come on up." He hung up the receiver and stood looking at the floor.

"Who was it?" asked Coke.

"A couple of big shots, Mandi and Riley. They want to see us."

"What do you suppose them bums want?"

"Well," said Regan, "you can bet there's something up, because they don't tag after nobody."

"Maybe they want to look me over before they get their jack up."

"Oh, God," said Regan with his head in his hands.

Someone knocked at the door and Regan went over to open it. There was a bellboy with the two gamblers, and he stood in the doorway, staring at Coke. Riley and Mandi came in, but the bellboy didn't close the door. He stood staring at Coke.

"Say, Mr. Mason," he said, "my grandmother's gonna be awful sick this night you fight?"

"All right, buddy," said Coke. The bellboy closed the door. Regan nodded in Coke's direction and said to Mandi.

"He eats it up."

"Well, it said Mandi, 'ain't that all right?'"

Mandi was short, stocky and dark. His nose was slightly flattened and his lips stuck out like a Negro's. His partner, Riley, was small, stocky and pale, with sandy hair and a thin, freckled face. They both wore diamonds and loud clothes. They sat down and Regan poured out a couple of drinks for them. Mandi cocked his head sideways and squinted his eyes at Coke.

"What kind of shape you in, Mason?" he asked.

"He looks in the pink," said Riley.

"He's rounding off good," said Regan.

"Yeah; I'm gonna plaster that shine," said Coke.

Mandi passed around a mono-strapped cigar case.

"Yeah," he said. "The money's all the other way."

"Ain't nothing new about that," said Coke, scowling.

"No, course there ain't," said Riley, planning warningly at Mandi, who was never very diplomatic.

"We figure we got a chance," said Regan.

"Well," said Mandi, "you can get all the money you want at three to one. New York's long on Prince Pearl since he stopped Joe Savella, and Chicago's crazy about him."

"Joe Savella ain't much," said Coke.

"Fair boy," said Riley.

"He had his own referee the night he got a draw with me," said Coke, "and at that I cocked him through the ropes in the second."

"He did; that's a fact," said Regan.

"Well," said Riley, "we was aiming to lay a little on your boy, Regan."

"What did I tell you," Coke exclaimed.

Regan massaged his chin and stared at Mandi and Riley. Nobody said anything.

"Well," Regan demanded finally, "what about it?"

Mandi flourished his cigar.

"Listen, Regan," he said, "what do you say we all make a clean-up?"

Regan laughed.

"Well, we ain't passing up no ready money. But what's the game?"

Mandi opened his mouth to say something but Riley beat him to it.

"Regan," he said, "winning don't do Prince Pearl no good. You know that. He can't get a match with no Grade A guys because he's a smoke. Your boy's the only bird that ain't afraid of him."

"I ain't afraid of nobody," said Coke.

"Course you ain't," said Riley, soothingly. "Well, Prince Pearl's been after a match with the champ for over a year now and he can't get it. Mike's afraid of him and anyway nobody wants a shine for champ, see? Well, Pearl's no spring chicken any more. He admits to 35, get the idea? He ain't dead set on winning from Mason here. He thinks Mason's a good boy that ought to have a whirl at the champ . . . so . . ."

"I got you," said Regan. "He's willing to turn a back flip for a consideration."

"Sure," said Riley; "he'll take it easy for five grand and your boy'll get a shot at the champion."

To Be Continued.
